123 U.S. Planes Shot Down, Germans Claim

Congress Cool to Total Mobilization Urged in President's War Program

Message Details Five-Point Plan; Bill Presented

By Robert C. Albright

President Roosevelt yesterday called for total mobilization of the Nation's men and women for the war's final thrusts under a national service act—"fair for one, fair for all."

The recommendation, tied to a five-point "win the war program," was messaged to a plainly startled Congress and later carried to the country in a broadcast from the White House.

Before Congress recovered, to take a mixed view of the plan to "prevent strikes" and make available for war production (with some exceptions) "every able-bodied adult in this Nation" a new bill was in the hopper.

In the Senate it was introduced by Senator Warren R. Austin (Republican) of Vermont, and in the House by Representative James W. Wadsworth (Republican) of New York, joint authors of a universal Service Act which for months had gathered dust in committees.

All Males 18 to 65

The new bill, believed to have War Department backing, would make all males between 18 and 65 and all women between 18 and 50 liable for service in selected jobs for which they are qualified, under a conscription system closely patterned after the Selective Service Act.

Austin stressed that compulsory features might never be used or used only sparingly as in Britain. Where additional workers were needed, he said, the President could first call for volunteers. If conscription was necessary, he said it would affect only the number and type of workers "who can best perform the work with the least comparative sacrifice and with the least harm to the national interest. Local selective service boards would be the judge."

The new bill carried several changes. Instead of the War Manpower Commission, a director of National Service appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate would be charged with administration of the act.

One change would compel employers to accept any civilians assigned to their plant, and subject them to the same civil penalties as workers for violations of the act.

Chairman Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina after a conference with Austin called a meeting of the Senate Military Committee for this morning to consider the bill. "Tell the boys to be ready to vote on it," he instructed the clerk.

Union Membership

Another last minute addition extends every assigned worker the right to join any union, but does not compel union membership "if he or she should not freely choose so to do." Wages would be unaffected and existing labor statutes would be left in force.

Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the Manpower Commission, which would be by-passed under the Austin-Wadsworth bill was said by his friends to have urged the President not to recommend any national service law.

McNutt, who stirred up a storm of labor opposition by saying in 1942 that such a law was "inevitable," was reported to believe that the manpower job has largely been done and that no further need exists for the law. It was said McNutt would not relish the job of breaking strikes.

Lacking any White House bill draft, Congress half-heartedly arranged to go to work on the new Austin-Wadsworth measure.

Chairman Andrew J. May (Democrat) of Kentucky of the House Military Committee first told reporters he had "never been hot"

Forced Labor Plan Assailed By Murray as 'Quack' Remedy

By Ben W. Gilbert

Philip Murray, president of the CIO, yesterday accused President Roosevelt of suggesting the "quack medicine of a national service law" to cover up the Government's administrative shortcomings.

In an 11-paragraph statement, the CIO head announced that the CIO "has been opposed to and will continue to oppose the enactment of any national service legislation."

No immediate comment from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was available on the President's "State of the Union" message to Congress which recommended adoption of national service legislation "to prevent strikes" as part of a five-point anti-inflation program. However, associates said that Green was preparing a statement for issuance shortly which would oppose the stand taken by the President on the labor draft question.

An AFL spokesman disputed the President's assertion that the measure would prevent strikes, commenting that national service had failed to stop strikes in Great Britain or Canada.

Meanwhile, it was learned that President Roosevelt had invited Murray and Green to meet with him today—presumably to explain his stand. There was no evidence that the President had consulted the two labor leaders in advance of the message.

Observers pointed out that presidential failure to consult Murray and Green or the Labor War Board which they head on a matter of fundamental importance to labor represented an important about-face by the Chief Executive who has been attacked by conservatives as a "labor President."

Murray's statement opened with an indorsement of the President's call for national unity and his plea for action on the price stabilization and tax fronts, but contained the following comment on the national service proposal:

"For the past two years, whenever the legislative and executive agencies become frustrated out of

Critics Discern Cue to Sidetrack Labor Draft Law

'Escape Clause' Seen

A loophole in the President's recommendation for a national service law yesterday was pounced on by Congressional critics as their cue to sidetrack it, but bipartisan advocates pledged a legislative test.

The "escape clause" was the President's statement that he favored total national service legislation only if Congress adopted his full war program of realistic taxes, war profits control, food-cost legislation and price-wage stabilization.

Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado said that "with all of those conditions, there will never be a national service law, which is all right with me."

For Whole Program

Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Utah said the five recommendations were "the important part" of the President's program: "The people of the country want the whole program. If we can get that, I am for it."

Representative Carter Manasco (Democrat) of Alabama said, "It's a five-spoke wheel—if any of them gives way the President doesn't want national service."

At least one Democratic leader opposed the recommendation on constitutional grounds. House Majority Whip Ramspeck (Democrat) of Georgia said:

"I am willing to do anything necessary to win this war, but I won't know how we are going to compel people to work without putting them in the Army. I've just reread the thirteenth amendment, and it's still there."

Republicans Back Plan

First to support the proposal were Senator Austin of Vermont and Representative Wadsworth of New York, (Republicans) who introduced a new version of their own bill. Austin said the legislation is "nonpartisan and benevolent—it expresses the great patriotic feeling of the Nation to do all that it can to win the war, save American lives, and be absolutely sure of victory."

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat) of Texas, who may have his own version of the legislation to offer, said the universal service principle "if properly worked out and administered, is entirely sound."

Senate Majority Whip Lister Hill said he has advocated national service legislation since the beginning of the war "and I am gratified the President recommends its passage."

Call Proposal Too Late

But Representative John J. Sparkman (Democrat) of Alabama, former advocate of universal service, said he thought the recommendation "comes nine months too late." Representative Paul J. Kilday (Democrat) of Texas, another House Military Committee member, agreed with this view.

A number of members reacted favorably to the 4000-word message. For example, Representative Lyndon B. Johnson (Demo-

House Group Approves $300 Discharge Pay

60 Days' Service Required by Bill; Shorter Term, $100

By the Associated Press

The House Military Committee yesterday approved legislation providing for mustering out pay of $300 for men and women who serve more than 60 days in the armed forces in this war.

The action came a short time after Warren H. Atherton, national commander of the American Legion, told another House group—the Veterans Committee—that there should not be any "dilly-dallying" on the issue of benefits to veterans of World War II. Discharges now average 1000 daily, and 800,000 already are back in civilian clothes, Atherton declared, as he presented his organization's program which inclued a proposal for $500 mustering-out pay.

The Military Committee recommended payment of $100 for all servicemen with less than 60 days' service. The payments in both cases would be irrespective of whether service was in this country or abroad and would not be payable to persons whose base pay is more than than $2400 annually.

Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky said he would seek House action on the legislation this week, probably Thursday.

The plan provides that persons eligible to receive only $100 would get the full amount immediately on discharge. Those entitled to $300 would be paid $100 on discharge, $100 30 days later, and $100 60 days after discharge.

Those discharged at their own request to take civilian jobs would not receive anything; neither would servicemen attending colleges or other schools as students.

The Senate recently voted mustering-out pay ranging up to $500 for as much as 18 months' service overseas.

Besides demobilization pay, the Legion program calls for doubled unemployment compensation credits for veterans for their period of service, Federal home-financing aid and education allowances.

Rep. Luce's Daughter Dies In Auto Crash

Stanford U. Senior Had Visited Mother In San Francisco

Palo Alto, Calif., Jan. 11 (AP).—Ann Clarke Brokaw, 19, daughter of Clare Boothe Luce, Republican Congresswoman from Connecticut, was fatally injured in an automobile collision today.

MISS BROKAW

The girl, a senior at Stanford University, was en route to the campus from San Francisco. She had accompanied her mother who is on a speaking tour to that city from Los Angeles yesterday.

Miss Brokaw was riding with a schoolmate, Virginia Lee Hobbs of San Francisco, who was slightly injured. Miss Brokaw was hurled from the car and her head struck a tree. Kurt Bergel, Army specialist instructor at Stanford, drove the other car.

Miss Brokaw was Mrs. Luce's only daughter, born of a previous marriage to George Brokaw, wealthy New York broker who died May 28, 1935, six years after a Reno divorce. Mrs. Luce remained in her San Francisco hotel room today—almost too stunned, friends said, to believe the tragic news.

Rep. Gavagan Quits To Become Judge

Representative Joseph A. Gavagan, New York Democrat, submitted to Speaker Rayburn yesterday his resignation from Congress after he had been elected a justice of the New York State Supreme Court. The Democrats thus lost their majority in the House for the first time since 1931, but expected to regain it in yesterday's Alabama election of a successor to the late Representative Steagall.

Pentagon Cost Above Estimate By 51 Million, Engel Declares

By James E. Chinn

Representative Engel (Republican) of Michigan disclosed last night he had made an independent investigation of the cost of the huge Pentagon project on the Virginia side of the Potomac which shows that the figure exceeds a staggering 86 million dollars, or 51 milloin dollars more than the original estimates and the amount authorized by Congress.

He said he would reveal the breakdown of the cost figures in a speech on the House floor after the War Department furnishes him with certain information he has requested.

A member of the House Appropriations Committee and long a crusader against high costs of Government projects, Engel said the War Department knew he was gathering data to denounce the Pentagon development and obviously gave out figures placing the cost to date at $74,185,954.

"It was a defense before an attack," he declared. "The War Department has done it before."

The Congressman explained he would be ready to give all his information to the House as soon as the War Department produces a breakdown of the cost of the network of approach roads to the Pentagon Building, the cost of terracing and landscaping and the source of the funds.

Back in October, 1942, Engel recalled, he made his first attack in the House on the cost of the Pentagon project and at that time predicted it would cost $70,000,000 when completed instead of the $35,000,000 as represented to the appropriations committee. Since then, however, he said, the figure

Quick-Witted Sailor Captures 4 Bandits With Their Own Gun

Oakland, Calif., Jan 11 (AP).—Frank W. Stark, 18-year-old seaman first class from Saginaw, Mich., in a hurry to get to his Alameda base last night, accepted a ride with four civilian youths, but——

"Put 'em up, sailor; this is a stick-up!" one of them said.

"A stick-up? Bah!" Stark replied. "If you're in that line, why don't you go big time? I'll show you how. I was a gunman in Chicago. Let me have the rod and we'll go places."

The boys gave Stark the gun. The car neared a bar.

"That's the place we want. I'll go in and case the joint. You wait."

Stark got out, told the bartender to call police, went back to the car and told one of the boys to come in "so I can explain the layout."

Then he went for the other three "so we can pull the job."

They all went inside. The bartender was guarding the first boy, and Stark pulled out the boys' own gun, holding them until police arrived.

GOP Picks Chicago for Convention

Opening Set June 26; Leaders Predict Roosevelt, Dewey Will Be Nominees

By Edward T. Folliard

Chicago, Jan. 11.—This bustling city of the Midwest will once again be the stage for the opening acts of America's great quadrennial drama—the Battle for the Presidency.

The Republican National Committee voted unanimously today to hold the 1944 GOP National Convention in Chicago, beginning Monday, June 26.

The Democratic National Convention, it is expected, also will be held here, probably early in July, a week or so after the Republican conclave.

Dewey the Favorite

In the opinion of most of the 200 Republican leaders now assembled here, the 1944 rivals for the Presidency will be:

For the Republicans—Thomas E. Dewey, Governor of New York.

For the Democrats—Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, now serving his third term as President.

Neither of these men is an avowed candidate. In fact, the 42-year-old Governor of New York has said he is "not a candidate" and "will not be a candidate." However, the word has been passed that he will be "available," and what amounts to a "draft-Dewey" movement already is under way.

President Roosevelt recently dodged a question on a fourth term telling an inquiring reporter that he was being "picayune." The GOP strategists, however, are assuming that Mr. Roosevelt will again be the Democratic Party's standard bearer for the simple reason that there seems to be nobody else in the party who would stand a chance of winning.

It is still five months until the nominating conventions take place, and the Republican organization leaders concede that a lot can happen in that time. But as of today, it looks like Dewey vs. Roosevelt in the campaign of '44.

Leaders Not the Party

Wendell Willkie, GOP standard bearer in 1940, doubtless would disagree heartily with this forecast in so far as it concerns his own party. His scouts here have already done so.

They point out that the 200 leaders who have been meeting here are not the Republican Party, and that the actual balloting in June will be done by some 1059 rank-and-file delegates.

Nevertheless, the Republicans here on the ground—most of them, at least—say that Willkie already is "stopped." They simply do not see how he can round up the 530 delegates necessary to put him over.

Willkie, it has been reported, will formally announce his candidacy for the 1944 nomination in about a fortnight and will set up headquarters in New York. Thereafter he is expected to wage a slam-bang campoign, one which may produce the bitterest fight the Republican Party has seen since 1912, when Theodore Roosevelt launched his Bull Moose "crusade."

Today's session of the Republican National Committee was brief

15,000 Kirovograd Dead

Bewildered Germans Routed Around Sarny

London (Wednesday), Jan. 12 (AP). Red army forces, in a simultaneous attack with Rovno region guerillas, tore through bewildered Germans 35 miles inside old Poland, forcing the Sluch River near Sarny yesterday, while Moscow announced that 15,000 Germans were killed in last week's smashing victory at Kirovograd.

The Russians completely broke German resistance in the Sarny area, said the late Moscow-broadcast bulletin.

After forcing the river they captured Stryelsk, 7 miles north of Sarny. They also took in swift attack the railway station of Nenovichi, 7 miles south of Sarny. Eight hundred Germans were reported killed in the area as the Russians widened their front to 14 miles.

Sarny itself was expected to fall shortly to attacks from the north, south and east as the Russians converged on the strategic rail town. The rail line itself from Baranowicze to Rovno was no longer of use to the Germans, forcing them back almost 150 miles to Brest-Litovsk, for north-south communications in this area.

A Moscow radio commentator said that in the first 10 days of January the Russian First and Second Ukrainian armies had "disposed of" more than 60,000 Germans and captured more than 1700 towns and hamlets. This implied 60,000 Germans killed in the Ukrainian assault which has shattered the Nazis' eastern line.

Details of the great German debacle at Kirovograd and its environs January 5-8 were disclosed.

Destroyed were 293 tanks, 336 big guns, 121 mortars, 445 machine guns, 94 armored cars and 978 trucks. Captured were 150 tanks, 188 guns, 242 mortars, 429 machine guns, 25 armored cars, 2009 trucks and 19 military stores.

In another blow to the Germans, the Russians yetserday smashed eight German troop trains carrying men, tanks, ammunition and gasoline, the bulletin said.

Soviet mobile units, operating in the area of the Smela-Khristinovka rail line, caught the troop trains unprepared and sprayed them with machine-gun fire. The Germans rushed headlong from the trains into the line of fire and the tracks were littered with their bodies and the wrecks of tanks and trucks.

In the Kirovograd area Gen. Ivan S. Konev's forces put a group of Germans to flight and captured several populated places as well as supplies.

More than 30 towns were captured by Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's First Ukrainian Army southwest and west of Novograd Volyinski where 1100 Germans fell in 24 hours. Advancing down the railway to Shepetovka they captured Radulino, 15 miles southwest of Novograd Volyinski and 25 miles

Yanks, British Train Big Guns On Cassino

Capture Two Hills, Tighten Pincers on 'Fortress' Village

By James L. Kilgallen

Algiers, Jan. 11 (INS).—Cassino, important road junction 70 miles from Rome, came within easy reach tonight of the big guns of American and British Fifth Army troops that seized two more hills and tightened a pincers around the Nazi fortress village of Cervaro.

One of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's American columns drove to less than 3 miles southeast of Cassino after clearing the western slope of Mount Porchia and consolidating its grip on Mount le Chiaia, below Cervaro.

(A Naples broadcast reported that Cervaro, last strong German position before Cassino, which is 4 miles to the west, had been captured Tuesday. This report was not confirmed. The German radio was quoted by Reuter's Tuesday evening as stating that the Fifth Army had launched a "major" new "drive for Rome after concentrating hundreds of tanks and laying down a drumfire barrage."

(The German high command earlier admitted that the Fifth

Lieut. Andrews, now in the United States Navy, held a lead of more than 1500 votes on returns from most of the district's boxes, but was well short of a majority in the district which the late Representative Henry B. Steagall represented for nearly 30 years.

Aussies Rout Japs Attacking Along Huon

Push Across Buri River in Drive To Join Yanks

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea (Wednesday), Jan. 12 (AP).—Australians, using mortars, artillery and tanks against a strong Japanese rear guard, have advanced across the Buri River on the Huon Peninsula coast of New Guinea in their push to join American invasion troops at Saidor.

The Australian advance reported in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique today narrowed to about 60 miles the distance between them and the Americans.

American Marines fighting on Cape Gloucester, New Britain, almost directly eastward across Vitiaz Strait from New Guinea, beat off two Japanase counterattacks and achieved an advance in the vicinity of Hill 660, south of Silimati Point. The Marines have reached the hill but have not yet taken it.

Set Destroyer Ablaze

One American Naval Catalina flying boat attacked a six-ship Japanese convoy 40 miles southeast of Dyal Island, south of Kavieng, New Ireland, scoring a midship hit on a Japanese destroyer, leaving it burning.

The enemy convoy evidently was headed for Rabaul, big Japanese base on northeastern New Britain.

Fighter-escorted Liberators and dive-bombers from the South Pacific command, hammered airdromes at Rabaul Sunday. The raid cost the Allies 4 aircraft, but 16 of 40 enemy interceptors were shot down, making a total of 73 Japanese planes destroyed over Rabaul since January 1.

Nurses Tell of Remarks

Families of War Wounded Men Urged to Hide Their Distress

By James F. King

The families of men who have suffered crippling or mutilating wounds were warned yesterday that these men worry most about how their loved ones will receive their disfigurements and maimings when they get home from the battlefronts.

The warning came from a group of Army nurses attached to the United States hospital ship Acadia who held a news conference in the Pentagon before going on a short leave while their ship is in port.

The nurses are First Lieut. Muriel M. Westover, chief nurse on the Acadia, and Second Lieut. Maryanna S. Schaller, Helen M. Fleming, Dorothy J. Christison, Gladys K. Meister, and Marion L. Franchere.

They have crossed the Atlantic 12 times to help bring wounded men back from Africa and Italy and served on the Acadia while the ship was being used as an emergency hospital during the landings on Sicily and the Italian mainland.

They said that relatives visiting a wounded man for the first time should get descriptions of his wound from the commanding officer or chief surgeon so they would be prepared to conceal their distress if he is disfigured.

"They certainly should not do what one mother did," said Lieutenant Westover. "As she walked up to the boy in the middle of the ward, she said in a perfectly audible tone: 'What in the world am I going to do with him!'

"One rebuff like that causes a soldier to retire from contact with

War Over Germany

London (Wednesday), Jan. 12 (AP).—Powerful formations of U. S. Flying Fortresses and Liberator bombers, escorted by Thunderbolts, Lightnings and new type long-range fighters, battled through stormy weather and terrific German fighter opposition yesterday to pound targets deep in Germany.

A special communique from Hitler's headquarters—which was not confirmed by Allied sources—declared that 123 of the raiders were shot down. The German International Information Bureau stated in a broadcast earlier that 80 of the four-engined bombers were destroyed. The Germans admitted the loss of only nine planes.

A preliminary U. S. Army communique said the Americans encountered "strong fighter opposition," but made no mention of either American or German losses.

Later it was announced that another American communique was expected about 9 a. m.,—today—considerably later than communiques have been issued in the past.

Targets Not Specified

The United States bulletin said the attack was made on "northwest Germany" but Germans said the Americans struck at "central Germany." Neither identified the specific objectives.

[Swedish reports, quoted by the International News Service identified the principal target as the former free city of Danzig, roughly 750 miles from London. Other neutral reports said some bombs also fell on Berlin.—Editor's note.]

3-Hour Running Battle

A supplementary American bulletin described the mission as a three-hour running battle in which the great armada of bombers was subjected to continuous attack during the entire time it was over Germany.

"The Germans threw in virtually every type of aircraft that could give battle to the bombers and their assault was vicious and determined," the statement said. One pilot even reported attacks by Stuka dive bombers.

Brig. Gen. Robert F. Travis, of Savannah, Ga., who led a formation, said there were only three minutes between the first and last

Germans Report Ciano, 4 Others Put to Death

Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 11 (AP).—The German news agency DNB reported from Verona today that Mussolini's son-in-law, Count Galleazzo Ciano, the aged Marshal Emilio de Bono and three other former members of the Fascist Grand Council were executed for "treason" shortly after 9 o'clock this morning.

The others executed were listed as Carlo Pareschi, Giovanni Marinelli and Luciano Gottardi. Another, Tullio Ciannetti, was given a 30-year prison term at a trial ending yesterday.

Thirteen other memberss of the council who voted for Mussolini's ouster last July 25 were sentenced to death in absentia.

The Rome radio said when sentence was pronounced Ciano cried: "I may have made a mistake, but do not accuse me of treason!"

War Sidelights

Argentines On Nazi Ship, Brazil Hears

Rio De Janeiro, Jan. 11 (AP).—A German blockade runner sunk last week in the South Atlantic was camouflaged, flew the Argentine flag, and had Argentines among its crew members, the newspaper O Globo said today.

(It is customary for German blockade runners to fly the flag of a neutral country is efforts to ward off attack. Use of crew members for a neutral country on such boats is contrary to international law. In the role of a neutral nation, Argentina would have no reason to camouflage boats under its flag.)

O Globo, in a dispatch from Recife, said 11 Argentines were among crew members landed in Brazil after the blockade runner sank. It said the Argentines were mostly of adult age while German crew members were mostly youngsters.

The same paper reported yesterday that the ship had been scuttled by her crew January 3 during a chase by United States and Brazilian naval and air forces, going down between Ascension Island and the African coast.

It added that 145 crewmen had been interned in a camp in northeastern Brazil. An official announcement last Saturday had said that the ship was sunk by the pursuers while carrying contraband from Japan to Germany.

3 Spies Executed

Gibraltar, Jan. 11 (AP).—Three Spaniards convicted as spies were executed here today.

5 Missionaries Lost 2 Months In Bolivia

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP).—Five men, American missionaries representing the New Tribes Mission, have been missing for more than two months in the Bolivian jungle, Roy J. Oestreicher, business manager of the mission, said today.

The missing men, he said, are Cecil A. Dye, leader of the group; Robert Dye, his brother; Elon Hunter, and David Bacon, all of Saginaw, Mich., and George Hosbach, West Branch, Mich.

Reports current in Buenos Aires that the five lost their lives at the hands of uncivilized Indian tribes "have no actual foundation," Oestreicher said.

A letter received at mission headquarters last week from Clyde Collins, missionary in Robore, Bolivia, and dated December 20, read in part:

"As you know, Wally (Wallace Wright, Saginaw) and I left the fellows to return to Robore while they pushed through the bush toward Corazon. . . . They told us to search for them if they didn't return in a month.

"At the end of that month Wally and I started out . . . to trail them, but . . . they pushed through the brush and jungle growth leaving very little trail.

"We returned to Santiago . . . There we made plans . . . An expedition into the jungle. We leave tomorrow."

The searching party has not yet returned, according to a cable received two days ago, Oestreicher said.

Collins' letter outlined three possibilities—that the five men might be lost, have encountered wild animals, and have been captured by savages.

Oestreicher said that "our fellows could have taken guns, but their purpose was not to shoot the natives, but to reach them with the Gospel."

Collins' letter said the report that two missionaries had trailed the missing men and found savages trailing them was unfounded.

Air Onslaught May Be Beginning Of Bulgaria's End

Algiers, Jan. 11 (AP).—American and British heavy bombers, operating from southern Italy, have opened a day and night onslaught on Sofia, capital of Bulgaria, in what may be a calculated campaign to knock that Nazi satellite nation out of the war and start a collapse of Hitler's unsteady empire.

Wellington bombers left Bulgaria's only important city a mass of blazing wreckage last night when they showered it with tons of explosives only a few hours after fighter-escorted American Flying Fortresses had fought off between 40 and 50 Nazi fighters and blasted the capital with as great a load of bombs as struck London in an night of the 1940-41 German blitz.

Strong German Defense

The Germans, equally aware of the danger of Bulgaria being knocked out of the war, made their greatest effort so far to protect Sofia, fighting a running battle with the Fortresses for 30 minutes before and during the bombing.

Escorting Lightning fighters bore the brunt of the Nazi attack and shot down eight Messerschmitts. Fortress gunners destroyed at least one other. Two bombers were lost from what the crewmen described as a "tough mission."

Greek Supply Line Hit

Liberators, in support of Partisans, pounded Skoplje in southern Yugoslavia. Skoplje is on a main rail line, over which the Germans supply their forces in Greece and the Aegean. The formations encountered no opposition.

RAF heavy bombers based in the Middle East, meanwhile, blasted Nazi fortifications at Salamis in southern Greece and the Elevsis airfield near Athens on Sunday night, a Cairo communique announced.

Nazis Admit Tito's Power

London, Jan. 11 (AP).—A Nazi military reporter in a broadcast admitted today the war effort of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) "has grown in magnitude; his followers, although a motley crowd, have become more numerous."

Reliable sources in Cairo at the same time said failure of six previous German offensives in Yugoslavia was indicated by inability of 17 German and 6 Bulgarian divisions to liquidate any sizable portion of the Partisan forces.

A communique broadcast from Tito's headquarters intimated that a new German campaign already had begun, saying the Partisans in central and western Bosnia were inflicting heavy losses on Nazi forces pressing toward the liberated sections of Yugoslavia from five directions.

New Army Recipe Uses Sea Water To Make Bread

The War Department announced yesterday that a formula has been developed for substituting sea water for fresh water and salt in making bread.

Taking samples of sea water from the oceans off California, Virginia, Florida and Washington, the chemists strained them to remove Algae, sea weed and sand. The water then was treated with calcium hypochlorite to purify it. The technicians used 62 parts of salt water instead of 60 parts of fresh water and two parts of salt.

The sea-water bread showed only a slight variation from bread made according to the standard recipe in texture, grain, flavor and crumb color.

DRIVE TOWARD CURZON LINE—Red troops plunged onward into old Poland yesterday and captured Voronovitsa and neared Smela in their drive to trap German forces in the Smela area of the Dnieper Bend. Map shows Ribbentrop line, border established by Germany and Russia in 1939; Curzon line, suggested in 1919 and proposed now by Moscow as a basis for a new Russo-Polish border, and (shaded) area held by Germans beyond the old Russo-Polish border in Russia northeast of Shepetovka.

In this area "a considerable number of German and Hungarian soldiers surrendered," the bulletin said.

No new details were given of the push toward the Rumanian frontier where the Russians were less than 60 miles from the Dniester—prewar border of Rumania.

Moscow reports said scouts were feeling their way along the east bank of the Bug River in the direction of the main railway from Warsaw to Odessa.

Its severance would throw the burden of supplying Nazi troops west of the Dniester River and in the Crimea on routes through Rumania.

(The German high command said the Soviets had opened a new attack from their bridgehead, northeast of Kerch and that "fighting was still in progress.")

123 U. S. Planes Shot Down, Nazis Claim

attacks when German fighters "were not around."

The claim of 123 United States planes destroyed by Nazi fighters and ground defenses by Hitler's headquarters—first time Allied aerial losses have been reported by this source—was exactly the top claim made by the Nazis after the Schweinfurt raid last October 14, when the Americans officially announced a record loss of 60 bombers.

There is no immediate reason to believe the new German claim is any more accurate than the previous and it appeared obvious that, while some of the greatest air battles of the war were fought yesterday, the Germans were seizing on the huge claim to pump new life into the battered people who for weeks have been on the receiving end of the most intensive Allied bombing campaign in history.

Like Smashed Cardboard Box

One bombardier said the Nazi fighters kept "coming in frantically mad" as the big formations pushed through to their targets. A gunner said the objective to which his group was assigned "looked like a cardboard box being smashed to pieces."

Others reported that the high-flying formations were attacked by fighters equipped with rocket guns and by Nazi planes trailing "tag-along" bombs, which are touch on wire and presumably designed to explode in the midst of the tight-packed bomber formations.

Invasion Coast Pounded

Medium bombers continued their daylight attacks on mystery targets on the northern end of the French invasion coast after RAF Mosquitos gave Berlin its fifth night of bursting bombs and screaming sirens this month.

The British announced that small formations of RAF fighter-bombers attacked military objectives in northern France this morning without a loss.

Although the sky was overcast much of the day and there was a misting rain, air activity over the Strait of Dover was reported to be the heaviest in three days.

Like Whole Nazi Air Force

Crewmen of the Fortress "Belle of the Bayou" said they thought "the whole German air force was after us" when about 75 German fighters of all types attacked it and others in their formation for over an hour.

Lieut. Col. Louis G. Thorp of Salt Lake City, leading a Fortress formation, said both single and twin-engined fighters attacked his group for about an hour and a half, but "we blew hell out of the target."

"I saw our fighters dog-fighting with the Nazis all over the sky," commented Sergt. Richard A. Elliott, Chicago, radio operator on the Fortress "Lil' Operator."

"We had at least 15 to 20 attacks by Junker-88s, Messerschmitt-210s and Focke-Wulfe-190s," said Sergt. Thomas A. Mitchell, Baton Rouge, La.

Sergt. Edward J. Kelly of Pittsburgh, Pa., said he saw three enemy fighters go down and said the tail gunner told him he saw five more.

U. S. War Babies Total 6,200,000, Census Discloses

America's bouncing war babies now number more than 6,200,000, the Census Bureau announced yesterday in reporting for the first time the number of infants born in the United States during the two years of war since Pearl Harbor.

The birth total in 1943, approximately 3,200,000, was the greatest in the history of the country, the bureau stated, and predicted that the wartime birth rate peak has been passed.

Added to the 3,040,000 births registered in 1942, the present strength of the "next generation" is officially estimated at 6,240,000.

Census Director J. C. Capt declared the 1942-43 total of births exceeded the combined total for the two years preceding Pearl Harbor by about one million.

Russian-Polish Border Accord Believed Near

London, Jan. 11 (AP).—The Polish cabinet held two meetings today—conferring with British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in between—and there were indications of the approach of some sort of working agreement between Russia and Poland so they might present a unified front against the Germans.

Another meeting of the cabinet was slated for tomorrow.

The conference with Eden suggested that Polish leaders probably had reached a decision and were anxious to learn the British Foreign Minister's view before making it public.

Early settlement of the dispute appeared to hinge on the degree to which the Polish government-in-exile was willing to reconstitute itself on a basis friendly to or at least agreeable to Russia.

One general opinion was that Moscow had opened the door to a settlement, but that if the Polish government did not enter, the door would be shut and the Soviets would turn their attention to the "Polish Patriot Group" formed in Russia.

The Soviets have objected to some members of the exiled Polish government, among them the army commander in chief, Gen. Kazimierz Sosnkiwski.

Russia's first concession in the dispute—the offer of a modified "Curzon Line" with Poland apparently receiving East Prussia for an outlet on the Baltic—was viewed here as an important contribution to a settlement.

One barrier to a quick agreement was said to be Soviet insistence on having Lwow in the southeast Poland area to provide a common Russia-Czech border and a friendly pathway into the heart of Europe. The Poles have insisted on retaining Lwow and Wilno, and thus far have found some British sympathy for these demands.

Some commentators here said Russia might relent on ethnographic borders, basing them on economic lines. One remarked that "it is easy to transport enough people from one area to another."

In all the speculation over territorial exchanges, little has been said about Poland's seizure of the Teschen coal region from Czechoslovakia in 1938, but it certainly is a subject to be explored by Benes and Mikolajczyk.

New Long-Range U. S. Fighter in Use Over Continent

London, Jan. 11 (AP).—A new-type American fighter plane, possibly capable of escorting bombers all the way to Berlin and back and believed to be the longest-range single-engine plane in the world, is now in operation in the European theater. It presumably is a variety of the P-51 Mustang.

United States Army headquarters announced that today's heavy bomber operation against Germany had the usual escort of Thunderbolts and Lightnings plus "long-range fighters."

The Mustang first gained attention August 19, 1942, in supporting the Dieppe raid. It was first built by North American Aviation in 1940.

According to the 1942 edition of Jane's authoritative manual, All the World's Aircraft, the Mustang had a 1150-horsepower liquid-cooled Allison engine, mounted eight 50-caliber machine guns. However, the North American Co. last summer described it as being powered with a Packard-built Rolls Royce engine and having four 20-millimeter cannon.

Patton on List

King George Honors 18 U. S. Generals

Algiers, Jan. 11 (AP).—Eighteen American generals, including Lieut. Gens. George S. Patton, jr., and Mark W. Clark, received British decorations today by order of King George VI for meritorious action in the Mediterranean.

Patton, commander of the United States Seventh Army, was made a Companion of the Order of the Bath on recommendation of Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, Allied commander in Italy.

The citation said the decoration was for his work as commander of the American Second Corps during the Maknassy Battle in southern Tunisia last year, and added:

"This officer took over the corps at a difficult time and by his undoubted powers of leadership was directly responsible for the success of these operations. He handled his command in a most able manner and by his personal example set a standard of loyalty and comradeship to me as Allied commander . . ."

Suicide of German Prisoner In Kansas Camp Starts Probe

Concordia, Kans., Jan. 11 (AP).—Col. Lester Vocke, commander of the Concordia War Prisoner Camp, ordered an investigation today into circumstances leading to the death of a German private who two weeks ago told guards "they are after me."

The German, Pfc. Franz Kettner, 30, died this morning of cuts on his wrists which Colonel Vocke said were self-inflicted.

There have been whispers of a German group functioning in the prison, holding trials and passing sentences, with a division between Nazi and anti-Nazi Germans.

Camp authorities reported Kettner, who had been kept in protective custody in the American guardhouse the last two weeks, was despondent and nervous last night. He was found with his wrists slashed at 4 a. m.

The Concordia Blade-Empire said two other prisoner suicides have been reported.

Colonel Vocke directed the ranking German officer to appoint a German staff officer to make an investigation of Kettner's death. He said an American officer also would be detailed to make an exhaustive and separate inquiry.

Kettner's home is listed as Bolzano, in northern Italy, and he was an Austrian by birth.

The Blade-Empire said the first German to take his life was a captain from Kiel who was buried by fellow officers and that an Imperial German flag, not the Nazi emblem, was used at the services.

The second also was a German captain. Germans buried him in a separate part of the prisoner cemetery, with other German officers refusing to have anything to do with the funeral.

Jap Strategist 'Suggests' Allies Attack From North

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—A Japanese authority, claiming to "wonder" at the Allies' strategy in the South Pacific, says the best way to attack Japan is from the north.

An English-language broadcast from the Tokyo radio recorded today by the United States Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service credited the suggestion to Admiral Ryozo Makamura, retired one-time commander of the Japanese combined fleets.

"The South Pacific waters are tricky and studded with innumerable islands and it is to be wondered why the United States does not advocate an attack on the mainland of Japan via the northern Pacific where there is no island to speak of," Nakamura wrote in a magazine article on strategy.

He also tossed out the suggestion that the Allies should "postpone their attack until stratoplanes become actually serviceable."

Senate Votes Navy 271 Million for Fleet, Air Use

The Senate yesterday voted the Navy $271,060,000 to expand its fleet and aviation facilities on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

The bill goes back to the House for agreement on amendments which boosted the total above the 200 million dollars originally voted.

The measure authorizes four million dollars for an expanded amphibious training program at "points selected by the Navy Department on the East, West or Gulf coasts," and appropriates two million for building additional facilities at or near the Alameda, Calif., naval air transport service plant.

It also authorizes these sums for "naval air stations and facilities to support fleet and sea frontier forces": North Atlantic area, $940,000; Middle Atlantic area, $3,050,000; South Atlantic area, $290,000; West Coast area, $10,984,000.

CLEARING THE TRACK:

Storms are the enemy of schedules. The appearance of a storm brings Capital Transit's sizable combat force of men and equipment into action. Theirs is the task to clear the way—around the clock if need be—to keep things running.

Snow storms present problems. If it's light, dry snow, the first of the season, the householder may look forward to clearing his walk as a bit of good exercise. If his walk exceeds a space of 2 x 4 the suspicion grows, even under those conditions, that snow removal may be a bit laborious. If it's a heavy mixture of cemented ice and snow, it's more than a suspicion—he knows it!

So does Capital Transit. A fall of dry snow is much easier to remove than a light fall locked tight with ice. When atmospheric and temperature changes cause a mixture of ice and snow, a transit company—with the best equipment made for snow removal—has a tough job to do.

We realize it's a temptation to drive automobiles on Car tracks when there is snow on the rest of the street, but we know definitely that such driving slows up service. We don't know what to do about it, other than to remind motorists to give streetcar riders a better break.

Halsey Says Taking Of Tokyo Is a 'Must'

Admiral Again Warns Against Peace Movements

By Hamilton W. Faron
Associated Press Staff Writer

Nothing less than the capture of Tokyo and a peace dictated there will satisfy Admiral William F. Halsey, jr.

The fighting commander of the South Pacific fleet made that abundantly clear yesterday with a press conference plea: "And don't let them stop us until we get it. I'll tell you there is only one definite place that has got to be taken, and that's Tokyo."

The 61-year-old admiral warned against peace movements again in reply to inquiries about the apparent reluctance of the Japanese fleet to meet American forces in a showdown naval battle.

One reason, he said, might be that "they think they can wear us down by attrition tactics and we will get tired and make a peace suitable to them—which, God knows, I hope no one will permit."

Plenty of Strength

There is plenty of strength to carry the battle on to the enemy's homeland, Halsey said, and movement of a fleet to Japan is no more the problem than movement of a fleet anywhere else.

"We have definite superiority in the air, on the sea and in land forces wherever we are," he says.

"We are going to keep on pressing and hitting him (the Japanese) continuously and unceasingly. He'll never know when the next blow is coming. He'll get set one place and we'll hit him in another."

Halsey reported that the Japanese war fleet has been crippled—seriously—in the battling thus far, and that the enemy's merchant shipping also is "seriously crippled" as the result of daring submarine warfare.

But, he continued in reply to a question, the Japanese still could muster a fleet large enough for a serious battle with the American Navy in the Pacific which "very decidedly" is anxious for a showdown fight.

Evidence exists, Halsey said, of Nipponese efforts to overcome heavy naval losses with a building program "which we hope and believe is not going too well."

Heavy Loss of Cruisers

"I thing they've lost a tremendous number of cruisers," he declared, adding "I hope they're getting short" of that important type of warship.

Asked about dwindling of Japanese aerial attacks, he replied that he is "a born optimist' but that "the pessimists say they are able to replace their losses. I would say that we are hitting them in so many spots that they no longer can concentrate their strength."

A possibility was seen by Halsey in that connection that the enemy may be draining home defenses to bolster waning air strength. He explained that "they keep on coming and you know you can't make a pilot overnight."

Halsey added that he sees no deterioration in the quality of Japanese planes; in fact, that they might be somewhat better. But, he says, the quality of pilots is falling off and "we get those monkeys now and they are kids that don't know what it is all about."

No Bigger Liar

He puts no credence in Japanese boasts that they will launch an offensive this year, saying "there is no bigger liar in history that the Jap."

Halsey read from a propaganda broadcast telling of the Japanese fleet "majestically defending" an objective and grinned:

"They certainly smell when they are 'majestically defending.'"

He reports too a trend away from the fanaticism that in early days of the war brought suicides by conquered Japaneses. "They don't seem to be so willing now to die for the great son of whatever he is," Halsey says.

Back in the United States for conferences with President Roosevelt and the Nation's military leaders, Halsey plans to stay for only about ten days.

"Do you expect to be in the kill in the Pacific?" he was asked.

"I hope so," he replied. "I have a lot of engagements."

Odds Are Even

Army Poll Tilt Dropped By Consent

By the Associated Press

Democratic Leader McCormack and Republican Leader Martin agreed on the House floor yesterday on one political point—that it would be just as well to drop any plan for investigating sample polls conducted in the armed forces.

The exchange was touched off after Representative Celler (Democrat) of New York referred to a claim by Chairman Harrison E. Spangler of the Republican National Committee that a survey had shown that a majority of the armed forces would vote Republican next fall.

Saying that polls were not permitted by the articles of war, Cellar said that friends would call Spangler's statements a "faux pas," his critics would term them a "stupid error," and expressed the hope that his "colleagues would chastise him."

Jumping to his feet, Martin quoted a newspaper story of December 27 which said that the Administration believes it would receive 70 per cent of the servicemen's votes.

"Obviously, Martin concluded, "there must have been some sampling by high Administration officials. . . . Let's have both sides investigated, or better, let both sides drop it."

"As far as I am concerned," McCormack concurred, "I am perfectly content to let the matter rest. I am willing to let the matter rest and let the American people appraise the significance of Spangler's flop."

"What about this statement?" shouted Martin.

"Just a news statement," McCormack replied. "There is nothing in it to indicate that a survey was made."

Gets Individual Cheers

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt's call for Federal unification of voting machinery for servicemen got individual cheers in Congress—and a completely unresponsive committee reception.

The House Elections Committee sidestepped a proposal for a Federal ballot and took up a Senate-approved measure which would leave the soldier voting problem in the hands of the States.

"Our soldiers and sailors and marines know that the overwhelming majority of them will be deprived of the opportunity to vote, if the voting machinery is left exclusively to the States under existing State laws," the President said in his message to Congress.

"No amount of legalistic argument can becloud this issue in the cases of these 10 million American citizens. Surely the signers of the Constitution did not intend a document which, even in wartime, would be construed to take away the franchise of any of those who are fighting to preserve the Constitution itself."

Speaker Rayburn told a press conference that Congress should have the "courage and willingness" to adopt a bill that will make soldier voting a possibility.

And a Southern Democrat, Representative John Flannagan of Virginia took the House floor to denounce those who are invoking the question of constitutionality.

Holding that by passing the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act Congress had demonstrated it has the power to protect the civil rights of those in the armed forces, Flannagan said it follows that it has the right to protect their political rights.

Insurance Case Argued Before Supreme Court

By the Associated Press

A state of "chaotic uncertainty" would result if the Supreme Court ruled that insurance companies are subject to the Sherman antitrust act, John T. Cahill, former Federal District Attorney at New York, told that tribunal yesterday.

He took sharp issue with contentions by Attorney General Biddle that Congress, in passing the 1890 legislation, "meant to get at all trusts" and that the act could be applied to insurance firms.

Cahill, attorney for insurance companies involved, asserted that the Supreme Court for 75 years has ruled that the business of insurance is not commerce.

Biddle took the position that the rulings upholding State regulation of insurance do not bar the Federal Government from taking action within its jurisdiction.

An eight-judge court heard the arguments, a situation that makes possible an evenly divided decision without a written opinion.

Justice Reed, former Solicitor General, did not participate in the case.

Thirty-five States have filed briefs contending that Federal regulation would destroy "the present effective action of State regulation and supervision."

Legislation is pending in Congress to exempt insurance companies specifically from the Federal Antitrust Act and to leave their regulation to the States.

Most of the argument centered on a Justice Department appeal from a decision by the Federal District Court at Atlanta dismissing antitrust charges against 196 Southeastern stock fire insurance companies.

Arguments will continue tomorrow on another case to determine whether fraternal benefit societies are subject to the National Labor Relations Act.

Boston 6-Graders Believe Roosevelt Only President

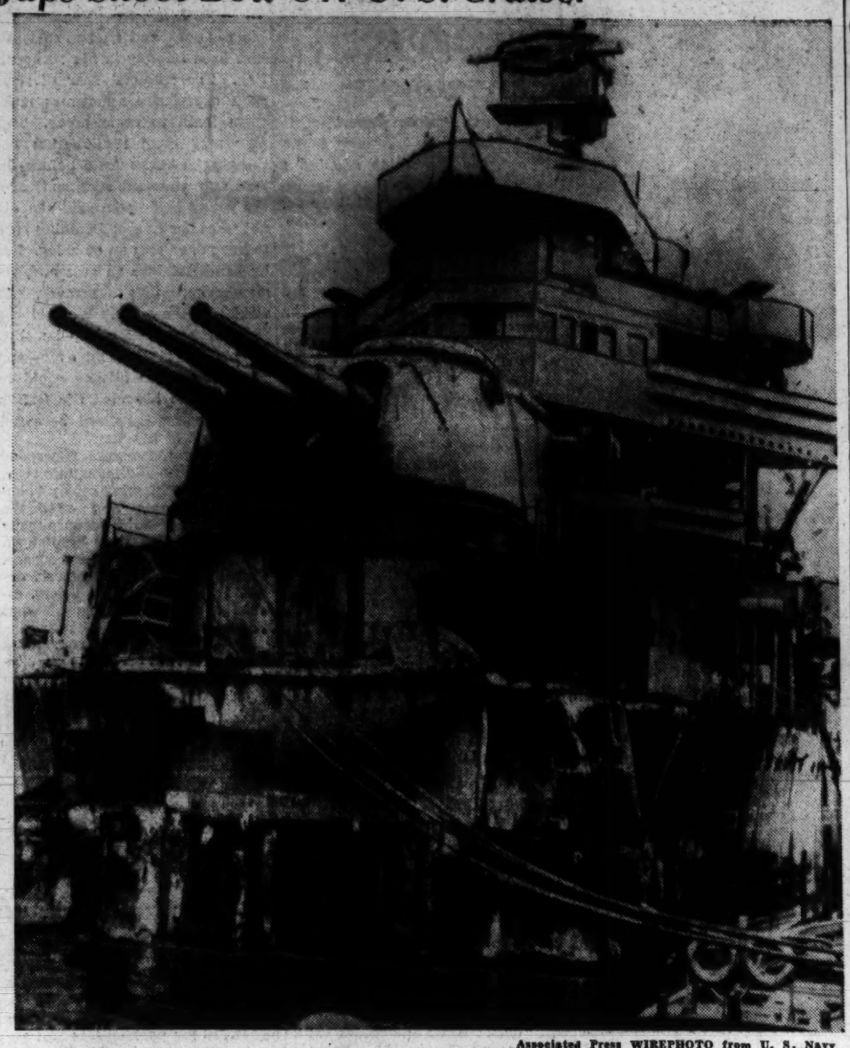

Boston, Jan. 11 (AP).—Many sixth-grade school children in Boston believe the United States has had only one President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, according to School Committeeman Michael J. Ward.

During a school committee discussion, Ward said he wanted to make certain that elementary teachers instruct pupils that Chief Executives other than President Roosevelt have lived in the White House.

"When I was in the fifth grade I thought that the country had had only three Presidents in its history," Ward declared, "but I am appalled to find greater ignorance among sixth-graders today. They think President Roosevelt's the only President we ever had."

Hershey Urges Services Hold Men for Jobs

By Walter Wood

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey advocated yesterday that men be kept in the armed forces until jobs are assured them after the war.

The Selective Service director declared also that demands for men by the military services mean that farmers of military age who are physically fit will be drafted unless they produce more food then they eat.

Hershey, in an address on proposals for veterans' reemployment and rehabilitation, said, "in demobilization it will not be wisdom to send home thousands to areas in which there is employment for hundreds."

Unable to attend the second session of the National Conference on Social Security because of illness, Hershey ordered his speech read by an aide at the meeting in the Chamber of Commerce Building.

"It is so necessary in our thinking to identify planning for demobilization for exactly what it is," Hershey's statement said.

"It must bear no relationship, as reflected in our attitude, to the time the war will end or be taken as any indication that it will end."

As an example of the "difficult phase" of the war effort through which America is passing, the draft chief cited the fact that while more than 250,000 registrants must be inducted each month for at least the first half of 1944, at least a third as many will be demobilized.

The sight of wounded men and others returning home from the armed forces, Hershey said, should not be interpreted to mean an end of the war.

After the shooting stops, more men than can be absorbed into civilian life should not be released from the military, if unemployment will result, he said.

"The Army and Navy set up their training objectives on the basis of the numbers needed for particular jobs," he said, "and just as it was necessary for them to know the numbers of radio operators, motor mechanics, machine gunners, or artillerymen, so must we know in the postwar United States our occupational needs in equal, accurate estimates."

The Selective Service director proposed that the returning fighting men be released as near to their homes as possible, so as not to crowd industrial areas.

The Gallup Poll

Recent Shifts in Population Pose Problems For Democratic Party in November Election

By GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 11.—Besides the normal worries of a campaign year the Democrats will have an added worry in the November presidential election because of wartime migration of workers.

Roughly one-fourth of all the people who would normally be in the voting population—or 13 million—now live in election districts where they have never voted before. The majority of them are Democrats. The problem which faces the Democratic Party is to induce these people to take the trouble to register, where necessary, or to satisfy other requirements for voting in districts where they are newcomers.

The size of this group and its importance to the Democratic Party is revealed in a survey by the Institute. The study first ascertained the total number in the group by asking the following question:

"Have you ever voted in the election district where you now live?"

The results:

Yes	75%
No	25

Each voter in the two groups was then asked what party he would prefer to see win the presidential election this year. The results indicate that the Democratic Party will probably exert a great deal of effort to get the migrant group to the polls because the proportion of persons with Democratic leanings in that group is far higher than in the other group.

The party sentiment of those who have never voted before in the district where they now live is:

Favor Republicans	39

The party sentiment of those who have voted before in the election district where they now live is as follows:

Favor Republicans	51

Clearly the Democrats will gain votes to the extent that they are successful in persuading the first group to go to the polls on election day.

In fact, the voting turnout in this group might very well make the difference between victory and defeat for the Democrats in a close election.

To this headache must also be added the problem of the soldier vote. Ever since President Roosevelt took office in 1932, the Democrats have held an advantage over the Republicans among voters in the younger age levels—21-29 years old. With the armed forces largely made up of men from that and younger age brackets, the Democrats will be at a disadvantage in the election if only a small number of soldiers vote.

Soft Coal Output At Peak in '43 With 589 Million Tons

Revised figures yesterday put 1943 bituminous coal production at 589 million tons, a new record by nine million tons, but Interior Secretary Ickes said it missed supplying the year's needs by at least 21 million tons.

"Despite numerous misstatements to the contrary," Ickes said in a statement as solid fuels administrator, "these figures offer abundant proof that the coal industry was unable to produce enough fuel to meet the Nation's requirements in 1943.

"We were saved from possible disaster by our stockpiles."

Ickes announced the latest figures put 1943 anthracite production at 60,327,000 tons, almost precisely the same as in 1942, when production of 60,328,000 tons was estimated. Anthracite requirements for 1943 had been estimated at 65 million tons without allowance for colliery coal.

Bible in Pocket Saves Flier's Life

Flak fragments lodged in the Bible, which he always carries in his left breast pocket.

"I can thank the Lord for my life today," Turner said.

War Powers Support FEPC, Hearing Told

Joseph Sharfsin, attorney for the Fair Employment Practices Committee, yesterday told the House Smith Committee that the agency derived its powers from the President's executive order which "transcends any other law of the country in time of war."

Sharfsin said he was serving without compensation in order to defend the agency's orders to the Philadelphia Transportation Co. and the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Employes' Union to cease employment discrimination against Negroes.

Both he and Malcolm Ross, chairman of the PEPC, expressed astonishment at statements by union officials that "chaos and impairment to the transportation of workers to and from war industries" would follow any attempt to enforce the order which would admit Negroes to jobs as streetcar operators and bus drivers.

The FEPC witnesses said they had no intimation in advance of making the order that there would be any possibility of a strike if it were enforced.

Employes Protest

William S. Fagg, a member of the employes' union, presented a petition signed by 1776 employes of the transit company, asserting that they would refuse to work if Negroes were employed as motormen or conductors. He predicted a strike would follow attempts to enforce the order.

Frank P. Carney, president, and Frank N. Cobourn, secretary-treasurer of the PRT union, and C. C. Hodgson, union attorney, told the committee the union has refused to recognize the FEPC directive because the constitutional right of the agency to make such a directive in violation of an existing contract between union and management has not been established.

Sharfsin maintained that if the food situation grew sufficiently critical in regard to manpower the FEPC had the power to order farmers to engage a certain percentage of colored workers.

FEPC Jurisdiction Limited

The attorney disagreed with Chairman Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, who said the executive order referred to merely gave FEPC jurisdiction over companies with war contracts and vocational training of workers.

The position of the company was set forth by Frederick L. Ballard, its counsel, who contended that the first duty of the company was to render adequate and uninterrupted service.

The second duty of the company, Ballard said, was to its employes, with whom the company has had "amicable, cooperative relationships" with no interruption of service for more than a quarter of a century. He said "the company would not willingly try any change or experiment at the present time when the heavy burden of essential war service now resting upon it and its men and women is being effectively met."

Truman Foresees New Problems in Unemployment

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—Chairman Truman (Democrat) of Missouri of the Senate's War Investigating Committee, said today eight billion dollars in Army and Navy contracts have been canceled to date, and declared the time is coming when some communities will find themselves with "a serious unemployment problem."

"The manpower problem, although paramount today, is nearing its peak," the Senator told the National Retail Dry Goods Association's wartime conference here.

"Although the manpower problem will continue as a serious one for the Nation as a whole, many communities will find that in their area they have a manpower surplus. In some communities there will even be a serious unemployment problem.

"This makes it very important that sound action be taken now to provide for increased production of civilian articles."

Security Tax Freeze Approved by Senate

Barkley's Plea Ignored in Vote For 1 Per Cent Levy

The Senate yesterday voted to freeze 1944's Social Security tax at 1 per cent, spurning a protest from Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky that the action was building up a tax burden for the future.

The 48-to-17 vote to block a rise in Social Security taxes to 2 per cent on workers and employers came as the Senate took up a revenue bill President Roosevelt condemned as inadequate to meet the test of "a realistic tax law."

Barkley, arguing that "we are morally obligated to make up by taxation any deficit resulting from the freeze" of the Social Security tax, joined with others who said demands on Social Security's funds for old-age benefits would increase 20-fold when the program hits its peak in the future.

Argument Is Futile

His argument was futile, however, against an overwhelming sentiment on the tax-writing Finance Committee to hold the tax at its present level. Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia said the committee was convinced the present 1 per cent payrol ltax will "completely protect the solvency of the old-age and survivors benefit fund."

The vote marked the third time the Senate has blocked an automatic rise in the Social Security Tax rate. On all occasions, the fight to peg the tax has been headed by Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan.

The Senate's action still must be approved by the House which earlier joined the Senate in a temporary measure keeping the tax rate stationary during the first two months of this year.

Saving for Taxpayers

Vandenberg estimated the freeze will save taxpayers—employes and employers together—about $1,500,000,000 this year. At its normal tax rate George predicted the Social Security reserve will amount to $4,850,000,000 by the end of this fiscal year, an amount Vandenberg said is five times greater than the highest estimate of Social Security costs for any of the next five years.

George called up the Social Security freeze provision, as one of the least controversial phases of a $2,275,600,000 revenue bill, as soon as the reading clerk completed President Roosevelt's message on the state of the Union, in which he urged Congress to adopt:

"A realistic tax law which will tax all unreasonable profits . . . and reduce the ultimate cost of the war to our sons and daughters. The tax bill now under consideration by the Congress does not begin to meet this test."

George told reporters later he couldn't see any sense in cutting down a tree to get the fruit, or eating up seed corn.

"I believe that taxes can go too high," he said.

Bowles Speaks

OPA Assails Price Control Opponents

Striking out at pressure groups "opposed to control over the cost of living," Price Administrator Chester Bowles last night declared persons concerned only with "making profits and still more profits while their country is fighting for its existence" make up a menacing wartime development.

"This selfish few," Mr. Bowles said, "many of whom are already making far greater profits than at any period in the country's history, are both resourceful and relentless. When their requests for higher prices are turned down by OPA, they often hire expensive lobbyists whose job it is to pull political strings and to bring pressure to bear on us from every conceivable direction.

"They hire skilled publicity men to organize attacks on the one Federal agency which stands in the way of the higher profits which they are seeking—the OPA."

6000 Requests a Week

More than 6000 individuals or corporation representatives write or call OPA offices throughout the country each week requesting higher prices for the products they make or sell, he said. Many of these requests the administrator termed "only human" and some legitimate.

"There are, however, a selfish few, who even in wartime, will never be satisfied until their requests to charge higher prices have been granted," Mr. Bowles declared. "Some seem to want price control for everyone but themselves. Others state frankly that they would like to wipe price control out of existence and let all prices rise to substantially higher levels."

OPA has made great progress during the past year, he declared, in simplifying rationing and making price control equitable and workable.

To accomplish the price and rationing job, the administrator said, OPA had an appropriation that placed the costs at "only $1.10 for every man, woman, and child in the United States." Only with the help of 250,000 volunteers, who have served without pay, could the job have been accomplished, he declared.

"The fact that this wartime protective service covering every community in the country, has cost each citizen only slightly more than $1 a year is, in my opinion, a remarkable record in economical operations," he said.

Capital War Fund Record Topped By Only 7 Cities

Washington, now with over 93 per cent of its Community War Fund goal of $4,800,000 reached, is eighth on the list of the 11 cities raising more than $2,500,000, according to E. A. Roberts, president of Community Chests and Councils, Inc., with headquarters in New York.

He said a total of $164,747,000 has been raised to date by the first 404 Community War Chests to report, representing 1.2 per cent in excess of their combined goals.

In commenting on the campagins to date, Robert said:

"Results of these campaigns indicate that more than 700 chests will raise a total of 219 million dollars for 1944, the largest national total since the beginning of the chest movement in this country 30 years ago." Last year 625 chests raised a total of more than 157 million dollars.

"The success of these campaigns," Roberts said, "is evidence that communities throughout the country used the Community Chest to unite their efforts to support essential wartime services, to budget them fairly, and to receive the most generous contriutions of the last quarter of a century."

their own failure to accomplish a total mobilization of ou. Nation's resources, they proceeded to recommend the quack medicine of a national service law."

Murray said the CIO has urged as an alternative "a true central coordination and planning on the part of the agencies of the Government responsible for war mobilization."

"The approach embodied in national service legislation is ineffectual and actually contains dangers of further complicating rather than aiding our manpower situation," Murray said.

"American labor, during the war period—in the face of all the miserable absence of planning on the part of the executive agencies—has continued to establish new records of war production unsurpassed in history."

As far as the rest of the President's message was concerned, Murray indorsed it.

"The President's message," he said, "exposes the glaring and miserable failure of Congress to combat inflation."

Hearing Scheduled On U. S. Check Bill

The fiscal affairs subcommittee of the House District Committee will hold a public hearing tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. on a bill which would make the United States instead of banks responsible for losses on fraudently cashed Government pay checks.

crat) of Texas said:

"To me national service would reflect the American spirit of one for all and all for one."

But from the opposition—some of them importantly placed Democrats—came declarations that the service law smacked of dictatorship and politics. Still others were cautious and unwilling to be committed. Most were surprised.

Assailed by Reynolds

Senator Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman of the Senate Military Committee, which would act on such a bill, assailed the proposal as a measure for "enslaving the American people." It would produce "the same thing Hitler and Stalin have," he declared.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana called the message "a fourth-term announcement" advocating "a very definite if not final step toward fascism."

"Campaign Document"

Representative Gearhart (Republican) of California also saw the message as "a campaign document" and Representative Thomas (Republican) of New Jersey styled it "the President's swan song."

"The kind of leadership I have been looking for since the declaration of war"—was the assertion of Representative Sheppard (Democrat) of California.

Among other favorable comments on the Roosevelt message were:

"The President is merely trying to do on the home front what already has been accomplished on the fighting fronts" — Representative Monroney (Democrat) of Oklahoma.

"The most powerful message the President has delivered to Congress . . . it seemed like one of his old fireside chats"—Representative Robinson (Democrat) of Utah.

for universal service. But following a conference with Wadsworth he said he would call a committee meeting next week to consider the bill and declared: "Some form of national service legislation" ought to be reported.

Congressional reaction generally was cool to lukewarm. The President's call for unity and a duration ban on pressure politics received a hearty, bipartisan welcome, but few even of the leaders came forward with a direct indorsement of national service.

"Escape Clause" Seen

Outright opponents of an all-out mobilization law insisted the President left an "escape clause" by specifying he favored national service only if other laws are passed "to keep down the cost of living, to share equitably the burdens of taxation, to hold the stabilization line and to prevent undue profits."

These separate recommendations, which the President made precedent to national service were:

1. A "realistic" tax law taxing "all unreasonable profits, both individual and corporate." He said the pending Senate tax bill does not meet this test.

2. Continuation of law for renegotiation of war contracts to prevent exorbitant profits and assure the Government fair prices. (The pending tax bill drastically modifies the renegotiation law.)

3. A cost of food law covering only "necessities" empowering the Government to place a "reasonable floor" under prices paid the farmer for his product, and a ceiling over prices the consumer pays for food.

4. Early enactment of the Price-Wage stabilization act which expires June 30, 1944. The President predicted "price chaos by summer" if this law is not extended well in advance.

'Equitable Whole'

"These five measures together," said the President, "form a just and equitable whole. I would not recommend a national service law unless the other laws were passed . . ."

The President plugged also for Federal legislation to take the vote to soldiers, sailors and marines. By implication he condemned the Senate-passed substitute leaving service voting rules up to the States. He said the overwhelming majority of servicemen will be deprived of a voting chance, if voting machinery is left exclusively to the states.

He urged planning now for winning the peace and lifting upward of American living standards after the war. He said America has accepted "a second Bill of Rights" and must be prepared to implement it when the war is won.

These rights, he said, included (1) the right to a useful and remunerative job, (2) to earn enough to provide adequate food, clothing and recreation, (3) for every farmer to sell his goods for a "decent living" return, (4) for every businessman to trade free of unfair competition and monopolistic domination, (5) for every family to have a decent home, (6) to have adequate medical care, (7) to have adequate protection in old age, sickness, accident and unemployment, and (8) to have a good education.

These rights, he said, spelled "security," just as the one supreme objective for the future of all the United Nations, discussed at Cairo and Teheran "can be summed up in one word: "Security."

In his appeal for unity, the President confessed to a "letdown" on his return to Washington's "faulty perspectives" after attending the Allied conferences. Then he let fly at "a noisy minority" which he said maintains "an uproar of demands for special favors for special groups."

"There are pests," he said, "who swarm through the lobbies of the Congress and the cocktail bars of Washington, representing these special groups as opposed to the basic interests of the Nation at large." He said they look on the war "as a chance to make profits for themselves at the expense of their neighbors—profits in money or in terms of political or social preferment."

He asked Congress to remember that this Government represents the fixed-income group, which would suffer most from inflation but has few or no high-pressure representatives at the Capitol, 'just as much as we represent business owners, workers and farmers."

He warned that overconfidence that "the war's in the bag" can kill American boys, just as disunity at home—bickering, self-seeking partisanship, work stoppages, inflation and business-politics-luxury-as-usual—"can undermine the morale of the brave men ready to die at the front for us here."

Renegotiation Repeal Means Steal, Izac Says

In a slashing attack upon "war profiteers" and their "powerful and evil lobby," Representative Izac (Democrat) of California, took the House floor yesterday to warn that "perhaps the greatest steal in the history of this country is about to be perpetrated."

"I say that advisedly," Izac asserted. "In the tax bill which passed the House a few weeks ago and which I understood is being brought before the Senate by the Senate Finance Committee this week or at the latest next week, there are provisions which practically emasculate the renegotiation law.

"Worse than that it goes much further. It takes from the taxpayer about two and one-half billion, but by changing the provisions of the renegotiation law, which is included in this bill it makes it possible for over five billion to be gotten back by the contractors who have been renegotiated."

Izac's speech followed close on the heels of the President's message in which was included a recommendation that the law for the renegotiation of war contracts to prevent exhorbitant profits and assure fair prices to the Government be continued.

First, the committee adopted a resolution on the soldier-vote question offered by J. Russell Sprague, New York National Committeeman. This said that:

"The Republican National Committee recommends to all legislative agencies having jurisdiction the enactment of legislation within the framework of the Federal and the several State constitutions which will assure to our men and women in the armed services the fullest and most complete opportunity to vote, being sure that the integrity of the ballot is maintained."

The committee then proceeded to pick Chicago as the convention site. The invitation was accompanied by a $75,000 fund for convention expenses.

National Chairman Harrison Spangler appointed Walter S. Hallanan, national committeeman from West Virginia, as chairman of the important committee on arrangements. Hallanan was an enthusiastic Willkie man in 1940, but has since been critical of the Hoosier-New Yorker.

Other committee chairmen appointed were Ezra E. Whitla, Idaho, contests; Wallace Townsend, Arkansas, rules, and Werner W. Schroeder, Illinois, call of the convention.

Edward F. Colladay, national committeeman for the District of Columbia, was named to three committees—arrangements, rules and concessions. Mrs. Virginia White Speel, national committeewoman for the District, was named to the committee on contests.

James C. Wilkes, chairman of the Republican State Committee for the District of Columbia, announced the local Republican convention would be held in Washington early in May. This convention will elect three delegates and three alternates to the National Convention.

This is the same number granted to the District in other campaign years. However, some of the States will be entitled to more delegates this year. The National Committee today fixed the total as 1059 as compared with an even 1000 in 1940. The additional 59 resulted from a change in the apportionment rules granting bonuses for States which went Republican in 1940 and 1942.

After the curtain had been rung down on the two-day meeting here, it was learned that some of the national committeemen staged a behind-doors revolt against Chairman Spangler. They were angry, it was reported, because he failed to consult with them on many matters, because he seemed too pro-Bricker, and because of what they felt was a lack of discretion.

This last complaint was based on such things as Spangler's announcement Sunday that he had asked four Army officers, friends of his and erstwhile Republican workers, to check up on political sentiment among American troops in England.

A committee representing the dissidents called on Spangler, and it was later reported that he had pacified them.

The Republican leaders are on their way home tonight feeling that their prospects of victory are brighter than they have been since 1928. Not many of them, however, think victory is in the bag. They still have a wholesome respect for President Roosevelt's vote-getting powers even when it comes to asking for 16 years in the White House.

Air Ambulance Donated by B. & O. Employes Is Lost

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP).—The British Ministry of Information notified the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad today that the flying Air Force has been lost in the Mediterranean near Bengasi.

The ambulance, which cost $67,000, had done yeoman service in ferrying patients from frontline landing grounds to rear field hospitals during the push from El Alamein, the notice reported.

Baltimore & Ohio employes contributed more than $85,000 in 1941, of which $6800 was used to furnish an Orphans' home in England. After purchase of the flying ambulance, the remainder of the money was used to buy radio sets for British radio workers.

his relatives and friends and sets him back terribly in his recuperation. The soldiers' fear of some such experience sometimes make them loath to come home. This fear may even result from unthinking remarks made before the man was wounded, such as that of the young bride who said she did not want her husband coming back to her minus an arm or a leg. Her husband did lose an arm and, remembering that remark, he wouldn't even write. We told her of his heroic service—he had medals and ribbons all over—and asked her to do all she could to remove from his mind the feeling that he was stigmatized because of the loss of his arm."

[Whether the nurses succeeded is not known.—Editor's note.]

Lieutenant Fleming said psychoneurotic patients also need the help of their families because many of them feel that their breakdown reflects on them and their courage. "Much of the psycho-neurosis develops from exhaustion. Fliers, especially, are the victims of what is sometimes called flight fatigue. Families must understand these cases and by what they say or write do all they can to restore the men to a normal condition. Many of them, of course, are restored and returned to duty."

Lieutenant Westover said the men at the front receive the best of medical care, usually within a few hours of their being wounded. Army medical corpsmen give them first-aid as soon as they are found and evacuation hospitals close to the battle areas give very effective treatment.

has steadily increased and information in his possession places the total at more than $86,000,000.

A field and progress report of August 31, 1942, Engel declared, showed that the building would cost when completed $49,194,000. This, he explained, did not include $8,641,416 for parking lots and access roads spent by the War Department; $9,534,000 for rights-of-way, access roads, bridges, etc., or $2,372,041 for terracing and landscaping. These four items, he pointed out, aggregrated $70,741,897.

"It is amazing," he said at that time, "that the Army and the Public Roads Administration should spend $20,547,457 of the taxpayers' money for parking lots, access roads, bridges, landscaping, etc., on a project that Lieut. Gen. Somervell and the War Department testified and represented to the committee would cost a maximum of 35 million dollars."

Poultry Surplus, Low Egg Prices Laid to WFA Drive for More Production

By Christine Sadler

Poultry farmers who cooperated with the War Food Administration to boost the size of their flocks to an all-time high are being penalized by receiving an unusually low price for their eggs, Representative Bennett (Republican) of Missouri, charged yesterday.

"WFA wants to reduce the Nation's chicken flocks by 50 million birds in 1944 because the markets are becoming glutted with chickens and eggs, and we have another situation such as has happened with hog raisers. The farmers are left holding the bag because they cooperated.

"Floor Under Prices" Needed

"This reduction in flocks is called for at a time when the War Production Board is asking an increase in poultry on prison farms," he said. "I'm convinced we need one voice to speak in behalf of the Government's food plans and a floor under prices as well as a ceiling over them."

Bennett said the Government had purchased 30 million dozen eggs for lend-lease since December 29, in an effort to keep the price to producers up to 30 cents a dozen. Cutting back the flocks, he declared, "probably will mean an egg famine and rationing next year."

To Save Food Supplies

In its 1944 poultry goals announced last week, WFA pointed out its desire to lessen chicken production by approximately 4 per cent under the record set in 1943 and broiler production by 19 per cent. The reduction has been decided on to save feed supplies, it was said.

An egg production 2 per cent above 1943's was asked for, however, this to be made possible by a culling which would leave the best layers in flocks to get the feed.

Chicken production in the country in 1943 was given at 925,652,000 broiler production at 248,576,000. The 1944 goals in each class was placed at 892,983,000 and 201,492,000, respectively, or a total reduction of 79,653,000 birds.

Distribution of Yeast

Meantime, WFA announced civilians would receive nearly 229 million pounds of compressed yeast for baking purposes in 1944, less than 500,000 pounds of dry active yeast, and about eight million pounds of nutritional yeast.

The latter variety, it was declared, will be made available in powdered form so it can be used in soups, meat loaf, baby foods, "and countless other foods," as well as molded into table form. "Tens of millions" of the yeast tablets are being purchased by the Food Distribution Administration for shipment overseas to Allies, the allocation release said.

Tax Certificates Sold on 2082 Parcels of D. C. Property

Tax certificates on 2082 downtown properties were bought yesterday at the first session of the District's annual sale involving tax delinquent parcels—1112 by private buyers and 970 by the District in the absence of bids. Certificates were bought for the amount of 1943 taxes due.

Yesterday's sale was the smallest sale day on record, and the total number of properties which will be offered this year also sets a new low—less than 5500. There are 155,000 properties in the District.

Auctioneers Samuel J. Kidd and Ormon Morris, both employes of the tax collector's office in which the sale was held, will today begin sale of suburban properties, many of them unimproved. Tax Collector Guy Pearson says private buyers will not purchase so many of these lots.

Buyers of tax certificates are entitled to 1 per cent interest on their purchases over a period of two years. After that time, they may apply for the deed to the property, pay off back taxes and assessments and charges. Thenceforth, the owner must deal with him in resecuring his property.

There were 21 bidders from firms at yesterday's sale, and 4 individual bidders. Bidding was fairly even, with friction between two buyers causing surplus bids on about a dozen properties early in the sale. In several cases surplus bids exceeded cost of the 1943 tax. The surplus is placed in the District treasury and eventually the bidder receives it back by one method or another, depending on how the disposal of the property is effected.

Air Forces Band Under Quarantine

Washie Bratcher and his orchestra have donated their services for the Army Air Forces dance next Monday at the Shoreham, replacing the AAF Band, which is quarantined because of chickenpox.

One 6-foot 4-inch Texan, a musician with the AAF organization, contracted the disease and was responsible for the laying up of the entire band. The quarantine is expected to be lifted this weekend.

Bratcher, usually playing at the Washington Hotel, offered to play. The dance, to be held between 9 and midnight, is a war bond benefit.

Steels, Rails Lead Brisk Stock Rally

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—Stocks generally enjoyed a restricted rally in today's market as buying revived for steels, rails and assorted specialties.

Prices were at their best, gains running to 2 or more points, an hour or so before the president's message appeared on the news tickers. While bullish implications were seen in the Chief Executive's recommendations for Congressional passage of a National Service Law to halt strikes and put the country on an all-war footing, doubts arose regarding the probability of such a bill becoming law and profit taking reduced peak quotations at the close. Other portions of the communication were received somewhat frigidly in boardrooms.

Activity quickened appreciably in the morning but dwindled after midday when the address from the White House was released. Transfers, however, aggregated 996,220 shares compared with 722,170 the day before and were the largest in more than a week. The Associated Press 60-stock average retained a net advance of .3 of a point at 50.7, widest recovery since January 4.

The market was relatively broad, 901 issues changing hands. Of these 510 were up, 183 down and 208 all even.

Prominent on the upside were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Chrysler, Hercules Motors, Goodyear, Sears Roebuck, Bell Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, Standard Oil (N. J.), Anaconda, Homestake, Dome, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical, Allied Chemical, John-Mansville duPont and Philip Morris.

Railway loans continued in the rising ranks of the bond department. At Chicago wheat was up ¼ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel and rye ahead ⅝ to 1¼. Cotton was 15 to 25 cents a bale higher.

Another D. C. Housing Take-Off

'Standing Room Only' Screened; Corliss Archer Is Sextuplets Now

By Marjorie Kelly.

It may have been because Carter Barron, an astute man and a strategist, fed the gentlemen and ladies of the press BEFORE the screening and then exposed them, disarmed and full of good will and an excellent luncheon, to his picture. That might be. But, whether for that reason or because it is intrinsically delightful, "Standing Room Only" was an experience worth risking the ire reserved by the composing room for those who idle their afternoons away at screenings and luncheons and consequently turn their copy in late.

This latest of the cycle begun by "The More the Merrier" involves Paulette Goddard and Fred MacMurray in both the servant problem and the housing problem of the Nation's Capital, with consequences just as uproarious (or WAS it that luncheon?) as those which made the Jean Arthur opus a boxoffice success.

But on this more later. It is booked for Loew's Palace to follow "Madame Curie," which opens this Friday.

Mrs. Samuel Wheeler has been appointed chairman of the women's ticket committee to sell war bonds for the bond matinee of "Ice-Capades of 1944" at Uline Arena January 29, Carter Barron has announced.

Mrs. Wheeler's committee last year set a record of more than $150,000 in bond sales, and she is busily planning teas and other events in an attempt to better that figure this year. The committee will make use of the ticket hut in the triangle of Post Square as a sales agency in addition to the stations at Loew's Capitol, Warners' Earle, RKO-Keith's and Station WRC, which are already selling matinee bonds.

Outdoing Papa Dionne

Miss Dorothy Johnson, the energetic advance representative of "Kiss and Tell," drops by with the information that tickets go on sale tomorrow at the National for the Violet Heming-Walter Gilbert-Betty Anne Nyman production's two-week engagement beginning on Monday.

She brings also the revelation that the Corliss Archer who made her debut on WTOP-C. B. S. last Saturday afternoon in a half-hour program is the sixth Corliss to shake the shekels into Author F. Hugh Herbert's coffers.

The other five of Mr. Herbert's sextuplets are romping through the merry situations of "Kiss and Tell", at the Biltmore Theater in New York; the Harris Theater, Chicago; the Biltmore Theater in Los Angeles, the Ford Theater in Baltimore (this is the company that comes to the National next week) and the theaters of Australia, where a company has been playing since Christmas week.

Prospects for the week to come in downtown theaters: On Thursday, "Cry Havoc," at Loew's Capitol, with Patricia Morison, Harrison and Fisher, and Cookie Bower on stage; and at RKO-Keith's "Flesh and Fantasy," the Charles Boyer-Barbara Stanwyck-Edward G. Robinson creeper. On Friday "Madame Curie" starring Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon opens at the Palace; "What a Woman" with Rosalind Russell and Brian Aherne begins showing on the Earle screen, with Tim Herbert, Ralpholsen and Lyn Shirley on stage; and "Women in Bondage" with Gail Patrick and Nancy Kelly opens at the Metropolitan. That's about it except for holdovers of "Thousands Cheer" at Loew's Columbia, and "Jeannie" (yes, still!) at the Little.

BARBARA MULLEN-"JEANNIE"

This morning the Little Theater's charming English film "Jeannie" goes into its ninth week on Ninth street, tying the previous record of nine weeks for "The Baker's Wife." At the end of its seventh week it had already exceeded the former record for receipts and attendance

Defense Workers Act

James Nataro and Joe Ploski, two real life aircraft workers, became screen actors in comedy scenes with Bert Lahr, in "Meet the People," at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Nataro plays a trombone and Ploski, recently released from the Army, a mouth organ, in accompaniment to Lahr's son, "Heave Ho, Let the Wind Blow."

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

A Break for Helen

Hollywood, Jan. 11 (INS).—The excited blonde going around town with her fingers crossed and with a four-leafed clover in her pocket is Helen Gilbert, and here's the reason: Tim Whelan is testing her for the femme lead opposite Frank Sinatra in "Mr. Cinderella" at RKO. There's not a bobby socks babe in the world who wouldn't gladly trade places with Helen. Sinatra got in town a few days ago, reported to the studio and then went to Palm Springs for a rest.

BARBARA STANWYCK

Helen has been around Hollywood several years, seen mostly in MGM pictures, but she never made much of a splash. She was a 'cellist before crashing the movies; was once married to a musician named Bakaleinikoff and later to Attorney Seymour Chotiner. They parted several times, but I believe they are reconciled now.

A Good Deal

Probably the last deal Jack Warner made in 1943 was the purchase of "Monsieur Lambertier" for Barbara Stanwyck and Paul Henreid. Maybe you won't know the play by that name. When it was produced on the stage many years ago it was called "Jealousy" and starred Fay Bainter and John Halliday. Jack's deal was made with Louis Verneuil, the author.

That reminds me, Verneuil has written a story on Sarah Bernhardt which I hear is terrific. I always felt Bette Davis is the one to play the divine Sarah.

Otto Preminger, who doubles in spades at 20th Century-Fox as an actor-writer-producer, goes back to acting for his pal, Bill Perlberg, in "Where Do We Go From Here?" It's a revolutionary war story and Otto will play a Hessian general who gets captured while he is in his cups (the general—not Otto).

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Jan. 11.

In Palermo a few weeks ago a Navy lieutenant who was executive officer aboard a destroyer started to hunt for provisions for his men.

FREDRIC MARCH

He found food and other necessities, but could get no water. There was water, water everywhere, from the mains which had burst after the bombings. But the lieutenant needed a pump. He asked Lieut. Col. Charles Poletti, former Governor of New York and AMG governor of the city, for a fire department pump. Poletti gave him a card to deliver to the fire chief, a Mussolini holdover..."Democracy. How wonderful," said the former Fascist. "When the Nazis were here, an officer wouldn't ask for a pump. He'd just take it. Ah, Democracy. And now, lieutenant, won't you give me a receipt, on your card?" . . . The fire chief watched, in astonishment, while the Navy lieutenant signed the receipt—"Lieut. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr."

On January 30, when the distinguished visitors come to the White House for the President's birthday reception, they will be accompanied by a Navy enlisted man—Nuncio Camoratta. He's the sailor whose life was saved by F. D. R., jr., when a bomb hit their ship . . . Roosevelt, who was wounded, applied a tourniquet to Nuncio's shattered leg, rushed to another ship to get some morphine, and then returned to carry Nuncio to safety. When the President's son was about to inject the morphine, Nuncio said: "I'm praying for two things, sir. First, that I don't die, and second, that this doesn't hurt."

Fredric March returned to New York the other day, after his USO tour of the war fronts. Sammy Walsh, the comic, accompanied him. In Iran they were invited to entertain the Shah of Persia at his palace. "Your job is to introduce March," Walsh was told . . . "And who introduces me?" Sammy asked . . . . "Nobody," was the answer. "And in making the introduction say: 'Your Royal Highnesses.' That's all" . . . Walsh, the veteran night-club m. c., couldn't resist including the Shah's entourage, and began: "Your Royal Highnesses—and guests" . . . After March finished, it was Sammy's turn to entertain the Shah of Persia and his wife. This was Walsh's Big Moment, and he waded in with a rendition of his specialty song: "Back the Patrol Wagon Close to the Curb, Sergeant—the Steps Are Too High for My Mother."

Prince Bernhardt, husband of Crown Princess Juliana of The Netherlands, was at El Morocco. He told of his anxiety to return to action. He revealed that he shot and killed four Nazis during the invasion of the Lowlands and hopes to return to kill more . . . Lieut. John Roosevelt will be assigned to an aircraft carrier . . . Freedom House will publish a monthly tabloid, "Freedom Digest." It will be edited by Mrs. Herbert Agar.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hecht are at Doctors Hospital, recovering from the flu. They expect to leave for Hollywood any day. . . . Hecht's last independent film venture was "Angel Over Broadway." George Jessel was to have been his partner. An appointment was made for them with Mr. Hudson, head of the Empire Trust Co., to discuss the financing. Jessel presented the production budget he had prepared—$600,000. The banker was amazed. "I can't see this done for less," said Jessel. "Look at this budget yourself, Mr. Hudson. What could you see this picture for?" . . . "I will see it," Hudson decided, "for 99 cents."

Norman Corwin has resigned from MGM, and will return to his radio work at CBS . . . Paul Stewart, who played such memorable roles in "Johnny Eager" and "Mr. Lucky," is being besieged by film producers as a result of his show-stealing performance in the new picture, "Government Girl" . . . The USO has sent more than 750 actors overseas to date.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

NOT SINCE the days when Justice Hugo Black, then a Senator, exposed the wolf packs of Washington, have Capitol corridors and cocktail lounges been so packed with the brazen, charming gentlemen out to lobby for their special interests.

Lobbyists have even got to the point where they threaten to run candidates against a Senator who doesn't vote the way they direct.

Most brazen instance is the recent backstage by-play to force Senator Claude Pepper of Florida to ovte for the insurance bill or else face a fight for reelection.

What happened was that Payne Midyette, a former president of the National Association of Insurance Agents, called Pepper from Tallahassee and asked him how he was going to vote on the bill exempting insurance companies from the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. Pepper said he was against the insurance companies and against the bill.

Midyette then became threatening. He is an old friend of Pepper's and is especially close to Pepper's law partner, now a Circuit Court judge. But he indicated, in none too veiled language, that the insurance lobby was ready to raise $10,000 each from several different groups and put a strong candidate in the field against Pepper.

Meanwhile, Pepper is standing pat on his vote. Florida insurance men thought for a time they had him converted and expectantly awaited his appearance before the Senate Judiciary Committee. This was a closed-door session, with nothing supposed to leak out. Next morning, however, Florida insurance men phoned Pepper wanting to know why he hadn't supported their position. They had a virtual transcript of his testimony against them.

All of which illustrates who is dominating, at times actually running, Capitol Hill today.

Exit Bombsight

THERE IS EVERY indication that the U. S. bombing to which the Japs will be subjected in 1944 will be without benefit of bombsight.

The Norden bombsight has been publicized as the great secret appliance which will help us win the war. It has been highly successful in the European theater, but in the Pacific it has actually become excess baggage.

Supply officers in Washington are still assigning bombsights to planes for Pacific action, but fliers are urging that the device be left at home. They have found that the most successful air attack in the Pacific is the low-level tree-top bombing, in which medium bombers sweep in on the target and let the bombs drop when they are so close they can't miss. This is better than any precision instrument ever invented.

Also, it is less dangerous than high-altitude bombing. Coming in low, the planes avoid detection by the enemy, whereas the high-altitude planes are caught both by instruments and vision.

The tree-top flying requires greater pilot skill, also the use of delayed-action bombs so that the planes can get away from the target before it blows up under the plane.

This is the kind of work that was done in the famous battle of the Bismarck Sea, in which every Jap ship was destroyed. It was also how the Nazis sneaked up on Bori and wreaked havoc with Allied shipping

Morrison's Mail

PROBABLY NEVER before in history has a member of Congress so flagrantly used the free congressional frank as Representative Jimmy Morrison in his current campaign for Governor of Louisiana. The marathon-lunged midget "Huey Long" believes in sparing no expense in his campaign—as long as the Federal taxpayers are footing the bill.

At the last count, approximately a million pieces of campaign literature—folded, addressed and mailed entirely at the taxpayer's expense—had been sent out by Morrison, urging Louisianans to vote for him in the January primary. The mailing charge alone would amount to about $30,000 if Morrison had to pay for it out of his own pocket.

However, Morrison hasn't contented himself with this gratuity. He has also introduced some brand-new wrinkles that should open the eyes of his older, though less ingenious colleagues.

A great believer in the "personal touch," Jimmy has four girl employes of the House majority room addressing by hand the envelopes for his campaign ballyhoo. It would be quicker and far less expensive to use an addressograph, but Morrison wants the Louisiana voters to believe that they are getting something special. He can well afford to do this—it's nothing out of his pocket.

For a while, one girl was given the job of imitating Morrison's signature on campaign letters sent to Louisiana voters, so that the voters would think he was writing to each of them individually.

District Rated Above Average In Car-Sharing

Progress in its five local projects was reported yesterday by Civilian War Services at a meeting of the board, which was told by the transportation committee that car-sharing in Washington today has "a higher-than-national average."

Reports of other committees showed that under the direction of War Hospitality, over 100,000 servicemen will have used the United Nations Center by the end of this week. Last weekend alone, 10,000 were cared for there, it was stated.

The family security committee's activities this year will include study of such problems as delinquency, particularly unmarried parenthood, Mrs. Verna Linzel, chairman, said. And a joint steering committee for the new advisory service to families of prospective servicemen (which begins operations in about two weeks) has been appointed.

In the WAC recruitment program, the full local colored quota of 35 was fully recruited, according to the chairman. Other projects in which progress was reported are child care and protection, victory gardens, and consumer nutrition. Cooperation with the D. C. Salvage Committee has also been worked out, it was reported, and all the programs are conducted in conjunction with existing agencies in order to prevent duplication.

Conferences On Potomac Dams Will Begin Today

Conferences between officials of the Army Engineers' District office and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission will begin tomorow, it was learned yesterday, to discuss the engineers' plans for building a number of dams upstream in the Potomac River.

Designed to give Washington additional water supply, the dams are planned to be built near Great Falls. Army engineers have undertaken the study under authority of the Flood Control Act of 1936, it was said, and expect to take the views of the Planning Commission under consideration before completing their studies.

Opponents have pointed out that the historic Chesapeake & Ohio Canal and the development of Great Falls, restored several years ago at the cost of thousands of dollars, would be endangered by the building of the dams.

First Victory Ships To Float Today

The new Victory ships, which start coming down the ways today, will be capable of making a round trip to England with a cargo in 21 days, 44 days faster than the average time for the Liberty ships, Henry J. Kaiser said last night.

The new craft, because of their greater speed, also will be able to travel without convoy, the shipbuilder declared in the radio program, "Report to the Nation," over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

200 at Tule Lake Strike, Says Paper

San Francisco, Jan. 11 (AP).—The Chronicle said last night 200 Japanese-Americans at the Tule Lake, Calif., segregation camp have been engaged in a protest hunger strike for 10 days.

The Chronicle said it learned the strikers were so-called leaders of a group of Japanese-Americans who wished to "negotiate" concessions with the camp administration. These 200, the paper said, have been confined to military barracks.

Control Of Spending

The age-old search for a substitute for legislative restraint has taken a new turn in Congress. Senator Tydings and Representative Disney have introduced a proposed constitutional amendment that would require a three-fifths majority vote of the House and Senate to pass appropriation bills, except in time of war. It would leave the door open for appropriations by simple majority votes, however, if Congress at the same time levied taxes sufficient to cover the new outlay.

Probably the chief purpose of this resolution is to direct attention to the staggering problem that will confront Congress in the postwar era. Our national debt will be swollen to astronomical proportions. And demands for large appropriations for reconstruction purposes, for education of veterans, for public works and so forth are already beginning to take shape. Congress will be under heavy pressure to continue spending on a large scale whether or not taxes bring in enough revenue to pay current expenses and interest on our huge debt. In these circumstances any device for holding the flood of appropriations in check is likely to be sympathetically received.

We do not believe, however, that there is any probability of this particular suggestion being adopted or that it would be effective if put into operation. Such a restriction could easily be evaded. Congress might pass a public works bill accompanied by an ineffective tax, and no one could tell in advance whether the revenue would equal the expenditures. Congress could easily overestimate the revenue expected from a tax so as to give a spending bill the appearance of constitutionality under the proposed amendment. No useful purpose would be served by cluttering up the Constitution with restrictions that could be so readily evaded. And for that matter few spending bills would be rejected for want of a three-fifths majority vote.

A more practical suggestion is that Congress be forbidden to vote any appropriation not recommended by the President. But this, too, has serious shortcomings. At present, for example, the most extravagant spenders are in the executive branch. When the brakes are put on, it is usually Congress that applies them. Then there is a serious question as to whether the power of initiating expenditures should be reserved solely to an executive who is not responsible to Congress. One effect would certainly be to increase the subservience of legislators. The chance of getting such an amendment through Congress, in any event, would probably be small. We hope that Congress will explore every possible device to bring a greater element of responsibility into our fiscal policy, but it is already clear that in a democracy there is no real substitute for restraint, courage and judgment on the part of legislators themselves.

War And Religion

The Rev. Elmer McKee, rector of an Episcopalian church in New York City, took occasion the other day to discount the probabilities of a religious revival as a result of the war. Evidently, the Rev. Mr. McKee believes that too much store has been set on the reports of fox-hole conversions. It is not that he denies there have been such conversions, but that he thinks the validity and completeness of conversions under the stress of great emotional strain must be tested under peaceful and even humdrum circumstances. Moreover, he points out, the general tendency of war is to brutalize rather than to soften the men who engage in it.

"A few men," said Mr. McKee, as reported by the New York Times, "will discover God for the first time under the stress of wartime pain and need. Many more will become hard under the dehumanizing strains of total war. Still others will come out of the conflict with basically the same religious foundations they possessed on entering it . . . Religion is not an emotional glow, or going with the right people, or doing good work, or a sense of fulfillment . . . Religion is the service of God for His own sake without any thought of gain. It is giving all one has to the One served. It takes a long time to get religion, and if one thinks he has it he is sure to slip. Religious revival is our deepest need, but the costs are the same in war as at any time and they are high."

It is possibly presumptuous to argue with Mr. McKee on what is, after all, a professional point, but it occurs to us to wonder whether he has not defined the idea of religious revival too narrowly. If he means, as he seems to mean, that there is little likelihood that a large proportion of our men in the services will suddenly and permanently become saints, we are forced to agree. But the truth is that saints have been a minority in every age, and backsliding after conversion is scarcely a new phenomenon. Nevertheless, it is also true that no very large portion of mankind has remained for very long without a religion of some sort. Religion and spirituality are not necessarily nor always identical, and it might be shown in some parts of the world economics and politics have themselves assumed the status and dignity of religion.

Our notion of a religious revival, however, would be the preoccupation of an increasing number of persons with religious ideas in the sense in which the words are commonly understood. There were some indications of such a revival even before the war began. They have been gradually multiplying since. Anyway, Professor Sorokin of Harvard has it all worked out in a series of historical charts and tables that a shift from a material to a spiritual orientation of society is inevitable.

President's Address

We expressed the hope in heralding the President's address to Congress that he would offer a unified national policy for the extension of the necessary disciplines of wartime to the civilian population. He has done precisely that. The President's recommendation of a national service law is a belated recognition that the corollary of total war is total service. It seeks to rub out the distinction—which the President has always denied but which in the absence of national service has nevertheless been present—between the home front and the fighting front. We hope the proposal will become law. In that event the entire Nation both at home and abroad would be rewelded into a single unit working with a common devotion and a common sacrifice for early victory and a peace that will leave no domestic recrimination.

The time for making the President's proposal, of course, should have been when the Selective Service Act was enacted. To conscript our boys for fighting and to leave ourselves with the privilege of working or not as we pleased was to leave a rank injustice on the national record. Certainly the recommendation should have gone to Congress on the heels of Pearl Harbor. But for three long years the President, as he himself says, has hesitated. He does not say what has now convinced him of the necessity of national service. Doubtless it was the spectacle which presented itself to him on his return from Teheran of selfish groups fighting for special advantages and making Congress a Tom Tiddler's ground for their ignoble strivings. The President said the spectacle gave him a "letdown." In this depression he was joined by millions of Americans without representation in pressure blocs whose working zeal was fast being undermined by the sordid competition of the spoilsmen. For those millions were the people who were the victims of the raiding parties on the national exchequer. Evidently the President concluded that he could no longer rely upon his prestige as Commander in Chief to restore order, but must ask Congress for the statutory authority to make service compulsory. His suggestion will at least accomplish the purpose of lifting the current debates out of the pettifoggery of factional and group rivalry onto the higher plane of the duties of a nation at war.

The delay in applying for a national service law has changed the complexion of the arguments in favor of it. No one would now be so foolish to say that such legislation is necessary to win the war. As the President says, we can win the war without national service. Certainly we should be farther along the road to victory, and American lives would have been saved, if at the outset we had dedicated all that we have and are to this titanic struggle. But victory over Nazi Germany and over militarist Japan is in sight, with or without national service. However, victory would assuredly be expedited over Nazi Germany and militarist Japan by "the total mobilization of all our resources of manpower and capital." Hitler, reeling from the blows administered by the Russian Bear, would see in the legislation the dread outlines of the American Eagle at last stretched to its utmost for the final attack. To Japan national service in this country would come as the end of all the Nipponese hopes that our warmaking energies would begin to fag as soon as Germany were defeated. These depressing effects cannot be gainsaid. They mean that "the toll of suffering and sorrow and blood" of our fighting citizens would be abridged by national service. Can there be two opinions whether in these circumstances any sacrifice involved by such a law is justified?

Other domestic aspects of the President's message are not so salient. But they are equally unexceptionable. The tax bill, which as it stands would be worse than no tax bill at all, was assailed as a bill which does not begin to meet the test of wartime taxation. This is that unreasonable profits, both individual and corporate, shall be drained away. The President pleaded for the retention of the law for the renegotiation of war contracts. Surely the plea will not be in vain. The returning Congress now has had time to hear in detail what their constituents think of the almost successful effort of the Bourbons among the business group to call a halt on the return to the Government of undue profits. There is another request for congressional cooperation on the maintenance of our economic stability. Unfortunately it is not coupled, as it should have been, with a pledge of administrative housecleaning. The shocking overlapping which has bedeviled our stabilization front called for both confession on the part of the President and change in the personnel of his Administration. For the ineptitude in Government has contributed to the general "letdown," along with the wartime growth of faction and group selfishness. No national service law could be administered with any degree of success by the men who have hitherto been wrestling with our manpower problems.

On foreign policy the President was frankly disappointing. We had been promised more information about policy-in-the-making, but the President contented himself with denials of what other people said had been happening. There will be general agreement with Mr. Roosevelt's thesis that the big powers must hang together if they don't wish to hang separately. Security alone, as the President said, demands it. But the American people today are troubled over the seeming lack of interest on the part of this Administration in preparing the way for a regime of law under which the big three will keep the peace. Survival, said the President about our domestic life, is not enough. We would add that neither is security in our international life.

Schooling For Veterans

Of all the forms of postwar aid to veterans now under consideration in Congress, none has greater value than the opening up of educational opportunities. President Roosevelt's recommendations on this score have been embodied in Senator Elbert Thomas' bill, S. 1509. This would provide for the payment of tuition at approved educational or training institutions for honorably discharged servicemen selected "on the basis of their intelligence, aptitude, skill, interest, prior training, education and experience." Further instruction for as much as three more years would be available to students of exceptional ability. In addition, the Government would pay for books, laboratory fees and student activities and would provide $50 a month for subsistence plus $25 a month additional for a dependent spouse and $10 a month for each dependent child. Admittedly the cost of this sort of veterans' aid would be high—Senator Thomas estimates it at about a billion dollars annually. But, as the President pointed out, "it costs less per year to keep a man at school or college or training on the job than to maintain him on active military duty for a year."

This proposed program has obvious benefits for the Nation as well as for the individual serviceman. It would cushion the return of veterans to civilian employment. It would develop skills needed for the reconstruction period. Under the terms of the Thomas bill, students would be apportioned among the fields "in which the number of trained personnel is or is likely to be inadequate under conditions of full utilization of manpower." Most important of all, to quote the President's message again, "the money invested in this training and schooling program will reap rich dividends in higher productivity, more intelligent leadership and greater human happiness. We must replenish our supply of persons qualified to discharge the heavy responsibilities of the postwar world."

Mustering-out pay, unemployment allowances and other cash benefits should, of course, be granted to veterans in reasonable amounts. But these at best can provide only temporary assistance in the problem of adjustment to peacetime pursuits. It is through education and vocational training that men can be best equipped to make their own adjustments on an individual basis. Many of them, to be sure, will come out of the armed forces with skills or trades acquired in the course of their service. Others will want to complete courses interrupted by the call to arms or to enter one of the professions. They are entitled to that opportunity.

Maybe It's True

There has been so much calamity howling out of Germany of late, such continuous outpouring of unmitigated gloom regarding the military situation on the Eastern Front, that many persons have suspected some deep-dyed Nazi plot. Is the purpose, observers ask, to delude the Allies into a complacent belief that the war is about over and so to get them to relax their efforts and lower their guards? Is Dr. Goebbels painting the picture very much blacker than it is, so that if, in the near future, there is any improvement in Germany's position, even a very slight one, the Germans will experience a great sense of relief and thus have their morale bolstered?

In view of past experience with Dr. Goebbels' tricks, such hypotheses certainly cannot be ruled out. But there is also the probability that the situation on the Eastern Front is really very bad, and is not likely to get any better. In that context the gloom campaign would be merely a precautionary device to prepare the German people for the worst. We shall soon know. Thus far the Red army's winter drive has shown no signs of slackening. The German armies in Eastern Poland are already cut in two as a result of the severance of the Rovno-Minsk railway. The German forces in the Ukraine are now threatened with entrapment as the Russians press on toward the Odessa-Lwow-Warsaw railroad, the principal supply and escape route still open to them.

To be sure, the threatened disaster, a disaster that would overshadow the defeat at Stalingrad, may not materialize for the German forces on the Eastern Front. But if it does, and that, too, is a possibility, the deepest black in Dr. Goebbels' paint pot would not be black enough to describe the situation for the Germans.

BEACH RIDER

I saw him come. I heard him shout.
He galloped by as the tide ebbed out.
He galloped by on the hard white sand
Wings on his brow, hair speed-fanned.
He raced three gulls, leapt a rolling log,
Caught up with the wind, was lost in fog.
Chiron's son? This I but know—
I saw him come; I watched him go.

President's Speech

By Mark Sullivan

Soldier Vote

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in his message Tuesday, came out for soldier-voting—and on that everybody agrees. In spite of an impression created to the contrary, there is no person in Congress, and probably no human being in the United States, who does not want every soldier to vote. The only question is one of method. And the question of method presents real difficulty—as has been discovered by the men in Congress who have given long and patient work to the problem. Soldier-voting will be achieved, but only by still further patient work in Congress, and also by the States.

Mr. Roosevelt, with easy simplicity, uses the phrase, "the right to vote." Important in that phrase is the period with which Mr. Roosevelt stops. Soldier-voting for what offices? For some offices—but not for others?

Soldier-voting means voting for all offices, from President down to county sheriff. It means voting for all Federal offices—President, Vice President, and Members of Congress; and also for all State and local offices—Governor, members of the Legislature, mayors, school directors.

ANY PROPOSAL which would draw a line between the two—which would give soldiers complete opportunity to vote for Federal officials, but less opportunity to vote for State officials—is not adequate soldier-voting. To treat voting for Federal officials as a superior function, and voting for State officials as inferior, would be a further step in that subordination of the States, which already has gone so far as to cause alarm.

This is the objection to some of the proposals which would have soldier voting conducted mainly or wholly by the Federal Government. Some proposals for voting by Federal action would give complete opportunity for voting for Federal officials—but do not provide equal opportunity for voting for State offices.

On the other hand, proposals that soldier-voting to be conducted by the States contemplate that the soldier shall have full and equal opportunity to vote for all offices—Federal as well as State and local.

As between the two, Mr. Roosevelt comes out for soldier-voting by Federal action. He says that soldier-voting by State action is not practicable. As of today, he is right. In order that soldier-voting be conducted by State action, it is necessary that some States make changes in their existing laws and regulations about voting. Among other steps, they must extend the time permitted for absentee voting. Adequate time for soldiers to vote, in the judgment of persons who have studied the problem, would be 90 days. And States must of course waive ordinary regulations, such as personal registration, or payment of poll taxes in the States which have such taxes.

MR. ROOSEVELT says the States will not do this in time. But the fact is the States are already doing it. Some States are doing it in regular sessions of the Legislature. In some half dozen other States, special sessions of the Legislature have been called. In at least one State, Georgia, a special session of the Legislature has already been called, sat for five days, made the necessary changes in its election laws, and adjourned.

Contrary to Mr. Roosevelt, the evidence is that the States are aware of their responsibility, and are acting upon it. The States are acting because they know that failure to act by them will create justification for the demand by Mr. Roosevelt and others that soldier-voting be conducted by the Federal Government.

The States know, and the people are learning, what was put in solemn words in a radio address by Gov. William H. Wills of Vermont last Saturday night. Governor Wills recited Vermont's historic resistance to centralization of government, distant from the people—as practiced before the Revolution by the British Crown, and as practiced later by the Federal Government at Washington. Then Governor Wills declared:

"Vermonters today are just as wary of centralized government—and with real reason now to be suspicious."

Serviceman's Plea

Americans, so you call yourselves Americans, you who go from day to day under the disguise of patriotism, you who quibble over pennies while your sons and loved ones are making the supreme sacrifice. Every moment lost in production is prolonging the war by days, with the men in the services bearing the brunt.

It was not easy leaving the ones we loved and hold dear, but not a whimper was heard at Bataan, Tarawa or Salerno. We have a job and are doing it to our uttermost, you who comprise industry likewise have an obligation.

Each delayed gun, tank or ship adds one more weapon to the forces of oppression. It's not easy sleeping in fox holes, knowing that death lurks as a constant bedfellow. Multiply your hardships a hundredfold, then you have our average day. It has taken a war to teach us the true meaning of the four freedoms. You're right, the weight of total war is heavy, but by shouldering your share our burden is lightened SERVICEMAN.

Regional Pacts

By Sumner Welles

Russia And Czechoslovakia

TWO OF THE ablest authorities who are now writing on foreign affairs in this country, Anne O'Hare McCormick and Walter Lippmann, have recently expressed in their articles divergent opinions regarding the inherent desirability and the timeliness of the treaty recently concluded between the Soviet and Czechoslovak governments.

The discussion between them has raised some exceedingly important questions which the people of the United States should now be passing upon.

Of these, there is one which is fundamental. It is the question whether the coming world organization should make provision for regional systems, or whether, like the League of Nations, it should ignore regional considerations, and be constituted in accordance with the concept of universality.

I know of no European statesman who has been a more sincere advocate of practical international co-operation than President Benes of Czechoslovakia. By reason of his conviction that the future independence and integrity of his country can best be insured if Czechoslovakia falls neither under the predominant influence of eastern Europe nor under that of western Europe, the words which he spoke at Moscow when he signed the new 20-year treaty of friendship and mutual assistance with Foreign Commissar Molotov are of special significance.

DR. BENES said:

"The Soviet Union sincerely desires a strong, consolidated, fully homogeneous Czechoslovak republic which would be a truly good and strong friend and a collaborator of the Soviet people in the future defense of a lasting peace in Europe.

"The same wish also applies to the future Poland. The Soviet Union not only desires good and friendly relations with her but also a strong Polish-Czechoslovak friendship and collaboration."

The three great powers, "and particularly the Soviet Union, fully respect the independence of the smaller nations and state that they desire a strong Czechoslovakia, a strong Poland, a strong Yugoslavia and, of course, an independent Austria, Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland."

It would be difficult to draw any interpretation from these words spoken by a Czechoslovak patriot of wisdom and experience and of proven devotion to the cause of the sovereign freedom of his own people than that both the Soviet government and the Czechoslovak government desire the new treaty to serve as a model for similar pacts between them and their neighbors of eastern Europe who are members of the United Nations, and that the President of Czechoslovakia believes that such agreements will guarantee the sovereignty and security of his own country as well as the sovereignty and security of the other countries adjacent to Russia.

IT IS regrettable, perhaps, as Mrs. McCormick has pointed out, that the two powers should have utilized a form of convention which bears the stigma of pre-1939 futility and to which resort, for purposes of deception, was made by Hitlerite Germany. It seems to me, however, that the outstanding consideration which will arise, if a series of agreements of this character are successfully negotiated, will be the fact that in such manner there would be created a regional system of eastern Europe.

Bearing in mind the history of the last 20 years, with specific reference to the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia, there is every reason why these two countries should take all possible precautions to insure their own future security by arrangements which will encourage the existence of independent, strong and, above all, friendly governments, supported by popular opinion in their vicinity.

As Mr. Lippmann has indicated, Russia has just as legitimate a motive in favoring the creation of a regional system of well-disposed, cooperative nations in her neighborhood as the United States has had in taking part in the formation of the existing inter-American system of the Western Hemisphere.

SUCH A development in eastern Europe would minimize the probability of an outbreak of constant disturbances in that area during the first postwar years. If such a regional organization were to be neither politically nor economically exclusive, and were effectively coordinated with a superior international executive authority representative of all nations, it would also help to bring about the lasting European peace which we hope to see established.

The "if" is all-important.

Were a regional system of eastern Europe to be employed merely as a counterpoise to the regional system of western Europe created under British auspices which General Smuts apparently favors, there would at once arise the probability of a return to the old balance-of-power system, and, in such form balance of power in a peculiarly dangerous guise. This development would inevitably imply the constitution of political and economic "spheres of influence" for two of the great powers.

The same danger would exist for that matter if the existing inter-American system of the 21 American republics had been conceived, or were to be utilized, as a military or economic counterweight to Europe or the Far East.

The existence, however, of regional systems functioning under the supervisory authority of an executive council of the future world organization, composed of representatives of the major powers upon which must fall the responsibility for preventing war, together with representatives designated by all regions, would help to solve many difficult problems which might otherwise prove far less easy of solution if the United Nations created the new world organization on the strictly universal basis envisaged in the Covenant of the League of Nations.

I shall discuss the nature of these problems in succeeding articles.

Strikes Comfort Our Enemies

The essence of the criticism of the labor unions is that their threatened strikes have retarded the war effort and, thereby, probably cost many unnecessary American lives. The basis for criticizing "the high personage" who made the statement that such a serious accusation should not have been made anonymuosly.

As a very important member of the United States Navy, I want to go on record as stating my belief that any such criticism of General Marshall (or whoever it was) is utterly ridiculous. It is perfectly self-evident that any threatened strikes of our major industries would give comfort to our enemies and would naturally retard our national war effort. A signature to such an obvious accusation is hardly necessary, and to pounce on the anonymity of the statement as a ground for criticism is absurd.

The great tragedy of this whole thing is the fact that because once prices and wages have been raised for one group, it is bound to be used as a wedge for raising prices for some other group. The result is that the whole price structure is thrown out of line and inflation is bound to come. This would be disastrous for the country as a whole and even for the very groups who were instrumental in bringing it on.

It seems to me that patriotism should not be limited to the armed services or even to a few special groups, but that members of the unions and of industry as a whole should be willing to make an "all out" effort—rather than taking advantage of the situation to improve their personal position. It is awfully easy to blame other groups for the sad results, but if each group, independently, tried 100 per cent to do its share there would be no occasion for blaming or criticising some other group.

Bethesda, Md., Jan. 9.

Messrs. Green, Murray and other labor leaders' request about the necessity for a definite proof that any strikes, especially the coal, railroad and steel, gives comfort to the enemy, thereby lengthening the war and increasing the casualties, is just about as foolish as a demand to know if a particular bomb from a particular plane on a particular flight on a particular target decreases the length of the war by a definite number of days, thereby saving a definite number of lives.

It can't be done. Neither can it be proved that any particular strike encourages the enemy to lengthen the war a definite number of days, thereby increasing the casualties. However, anyone who uses what's in his head above his eyebrows knows that any strike, no matter how small, has its effect on the enemy's morale if they hear about it, and is therefore bound to lengthen the war and increase casualties.

Income Tax Forms

The New Dealers have a mania to force the people to do the easiest thing the hardest way. The latest example is the form which the Treasury has issued for use by those who are required to report their holdings of foreign securities. The form comes to you with pages of detailed instructions to be followed in filling it out. To one who owns, like myself, but one Latin-American bond whose market value is only $200, more or less, this complicated form is ridiculous, and the majority of holders of foreign bonds belong to this class. Why cannot the bureaucrats prepare for this class a report form which can be filled out without spending hours over it? Heaven knows I am willing enough to pay my income tax and report my holdings and do whatever is required by the Government, but for God's sake, let us do these things in a way that does not tax our mind and our time. My name is immaterial—I am just one of the millions who are just about ready to revolt against the red tape of the bureaucracy.

Capital Babel

By Malvina Lindsay

Why Washingtonese?

ADVOCATES OF Esperanto—if there are still any around—would probably insist that one of the chief wars on the home front, that between Congressman and "bureaucrats," could be settled by the antagonists' learning to speak a common language. Perhaps that is one of the things the basic English people have in mind. Certainly in the confusion of tongues existing in the Capital, no two languages could be further apart in form and spirit than the grandiose oratory of the legislators and the pedantic jargon of the agency intellectuals.

Traditional American stump oratory still holds sway to a surprising extent in Congress, especially in the Senate. It recently had a grandiloquent outburst in the war of words between Southern Democrats and their alleged detractors. We may expect to hear a great many more ringing phrases and soaring periods, a great many more eulogies of the Constitution and calls on the Admighty as the presidential campaign and the settlement of the peace approach.

Also, as we go into the final big push of the war, and at the same time look ahead to the adjustments of peace, we are likely to get many more directives and agendas relating to "allocations," "procedures," "priorities" and "potentialities."

Oratorical Americans

The American Congress is probably the most oratorical legislative body in the world. When its members complain of waste of paper by "bureaucrats," the latter reply that the Congressional Record last year took five times as much paper as all Government press releases combined. The Record, for all its reputation for dullness, is shot through with sentiment and with the florid, familiar phrases that Americans have come to expect of public speakers.

For example, servicemen are "the brave boys at the front," and frequently coupled in speech with "their loved ones." Men and women are "the Nation's manhood and womanhood"; women are "the splendid women of our Nation." Congress is the "house of our fathers," or "this great deliberative, legislative body." The Nation itself is "this glorious country of ours," the region from which the speaker comes "the grandest the sun ever shown on," his constituents the "finest people God ever made." The "founding fathers," "true Americanism," "the American way of life" are apt to embellish the dryest financial discussion. Love of Old Glory, love of State or region, love of the Constitution, love of the common man, love of freedom, a facility with scriptural phrases, and the verbal ability to take the hide off an enemy—these are the basis of the oratory of the traditional congressional spellbinder, the one likely to be most vocal in the debates and filibusters to come.

Yet why should this be so when high school and college speech teachers have so long been saying the old oratory was out? What becomes of all the bright young men and women supposedly skilled in concise, fresh-phrased public speech who go out so dauntlessly to lead the world? Do none of them ever reach the Senate?

It is equally puzzling why so many agency and bureau executives are still using antiquated legal and professional lingo. Why do they plead for "security of war information" instead of warning against "loose talk"? Why must they "illuminate" instead of inform or tell; "effectuate" instead of bring about, or possibly just do? Why must they constantly "implement," "allocate," "evaluate," "motivate," "orientate," etc.?

Lincoln's Language

All of them—and the statesmen as well—must have been exposed in some way during their education to the basic rules of vocabulary in "The King's English," namely, prefer the familiar word to the far-fetched, the concrete to the abstract, the single to the circumlocution, the short to the long, the Saxon to the Latinism. Even Abraham Lincoln, who owed nothing to speech teachers or rhetoric courses, did not fall into congressional hyperbole or bureau verbosity. His Gettysburg address of 268 words contains 190 of one syllable, 49 of two syllables and 19 of three or more syllables.

It would of course take more than a common language to bridge the temperamental differences of the orators and the pedants. Community of speech has never brought the Anglophobes and the cockier Britishers together. Moreover, imagine a Senate filibuster or an OPA order in basic English! To rob congressional speech of its color, bombast and tradition would probably cause a gallery revolt. To abolish the coining of bigger, if not better, words in directives might possibly impair academic shades of meaning. Yet congressional diatribe against "bureaucrats" has weakened public confidence in war agencies. Obscure phrasing in directives has stirred native American prejudice against "professors"—both in Congress and elsewhere. Simpler and less inaguage all along the line might bring more peace at home in these critical days when there is so much to be done both in Congress and in the agencies . . . and so little time.

President in His Message Presents Program for Winning the War

The text of the President's Message to Congress yesterday follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

This Nation in the past two years has become an active partner in the world's greatest war against human slavery.

We have joined with like-minded people in order to defend ourselves in a world that has been gravely threatened with gangster rule.

But I do not think that any of us Americans can be content with mere survival. Sacrifices that we and our Allies are making impose upon us all a sacred obligation to see to it that out of this war we and our children will gain something better than mere survival.

We are united in determination that this war shall not be followed by another interim which leads to new disaster—that we shall not repeat the tragic errors of ostrich isolationism—that we shall not repeat the excesses of the wild twenties when this Nation went for a joyride on a roller coaster which ended in a tragic crash.

When Mr. Hull went Moscow in October, and when I went to Cairo and Teheran in November, we knew that we were in agreement with our Allies in our common determination to fight and win this war. But there were many vital questions concerning the future peace, and they were discussed in an atmosphere of complete candor and harmony.

Mistake of Last War

In the last war such discussions, such meetingss, did not even begin until the shooting had stopped and the delegates began to assemble at the peace table. There had been no previous opportunities for man-to-man discussions which lead to meetings of minds. The result was a peace which was not a peace.

That was a mistake which we are not repeating in this war.

And right here I want to address a word or two to some suspicious souls who are fearful that Mr. Hull or I have made "commitments" for the future which might pledge this Nation to secret treaties, or to enacting the role of Santa Claus.

To such suspicious souls—using a polite terminology—I wish to say that Mr. Churchill, and Marshal Stalin, and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek are all thoroughly conversant with the provisions of our Constitution. And so is Mr. Hull. And so am I.

Of course we made some commitments. We most certainly committed ourselves to very large specific military plans which require the use of all Allied forces to bring about the defeat of our enemies at the earliest possible time.

No Secret Treaties

But there were no secret treaties or political or financial commitments.

The one supreme objective for the future, which we discussed for each nation individually, and for all the United Nations, can be summed up in one word: Security.

And that means not only physical security which provides safety from attacks by aggressors. It means also economic security, social security, moral security—in a family of nations.

In the plain down-to-earth talks that I had with the Generalissimo and Marshal Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill, it was abundantly clear that they are all most deeply interested in the resumption of peaceful progress by their own peoples—progress toward a better life. All our Allies want freedom to develop their lands and resources, to build up industry, to increase education and individual opportunity, and to raise standards of living.

All our Allies have learned by bitter experience that real development will not be possible if they are to be diverted from their purpose by repeated wars—or even threats of war.

Basis of United Stand

China and Russia are truly united with Britain and America in recognition of this essential fact:

The best interests of each nation, large and small, demand that all freedom-loving nations shall join together in a just and durable system of peace. In the present world situation, evidenced by the actions of Germany, Italy and Japan, unquestioned military control over disturbers of the peace is as necessary among nations as it is among citizens in a community. And an equally basic essential to peace is a decent standard of living for all individual men and women and children in all nations. Freedom from fear is eternally linked with freedom from want.

There are people who burrow through our Nation like unseeing moles, and attempt to spread the suspicion that if other nations are encouraged to raise their standards of living, our own American standard of living must of necessity be depressed.

The fact is the very contrary. It has been shown time and again that if the standard of living of any country goes up, so does its purchasing power—and that such a rise encourages a better standard of living in neighboring countries with whom it trades. That is just plain common sense—and it is the kind of plain common sense that provided the basis for our discussions at Moscow, Cairo and Teheran.

Returning from my journeyings, I must confess to a sense of "let-down" when I found many evidences of faulty perspectives here in Washington. The faulty perspective consists in overemphasizing lesser problems and thereby underemphasizing the first and greatest problem.

People Want to Know

The overwhelming majority of our people have met the demands of this war with magnificent courage and understanding. They have accepted inconveniences; they have accepted hardships; they have accepted tragic sacrifices. And they are ready and eager to make whatever further contributions are needed to win the war as quickly as possible—if only they are given the chance to know what is required of them.

However, while the majority goes on about its great work without complaint, a noisy minority maintains an uproar of demands for special favors for special groups. There are pests who swarm through the lobbies of the Congress and the cocktail bars of Washington, representing these special groups as opposed to the basic interests of the Nation as a whole. They have come to look upon the war primarily as a chance to make profits for themselves at the expense of their neighbors—profits in money or in terms of political or social preferment.

Such selfish agitation can be highly dangerous in wartime. It creates confusion. It damages morale. It hampers our national effort. It muddies the waters and therefore prolongs the war.

If we analyze American history impartially, we cannot escape the fact that in our past we have not always forgotten individual and selfish and partisan interest in time of war—we have not always been united in purpose and direction. We cannot overlook the serious dissensions and the lack of unity in our War of the Revolution, in our War of 1812, or in our War Between the States, when the survival of the Union itself was at stake.

In the first World War we came closer to national unity than in any previous war. But that war lasted only a year and a half, and increasing signs of disunity began to appear during the final months of the conflict.

All Groups Interdependent

In this war, we have been compelled to learn how interdependent upon each other are all groups and sections of the population of America.

Increased food costs, for example, will bring new demands for wage increases from all war workers, which will in turn raise all prices of things, including those things which the farmers themselves have to buy. Increased wages or prices will each in turn produce the same results. They all have a particularly disastrous result on all fixed income groups.

And I hope you will remember that all of us in this Government represent the fixed income group just as much as we represent business owners, workers and farmers. This group of fixed income people includes teachers, clergy, policemen, firemen, widows and minors on fixed incomes, wives and dependents of our soldiers and sailors, and old age pensioners. They and their families add up to one quarter of our 130 million people. They have few or no high pressure representatives at the Capitol. In a period of gross inflation they would be the worst sufferers.

If ever there was a time to subordinate individual or group selfishness to the national good, that time is now. Disunity at home—bickerings, self-seeking partisanship, stoppages of work, inflation, business as usual, politics as usual, luxury as usuual—these are the influences which can undermine the morale of the brave men ready to die at the front for us here.

War Is Not Yet Won

Those who are doing most of the complaining are not deliberately striving to sabotage the national war effort. They are laboring under the delusion that the time is past when we must make prodigious sacrifices—that the war is already won and we can begin to slacken off. But the dangerous folly of that point of view can be measured by the distance that separates our troops from their ultimate objectives in Berlin and Tokyo—and by the sum of all the perils that lie along the way.

Overconfidence and complacency are among our deadliest enemies. Last spring—after notable victories at Stalingrad and in Tunisia and against the U-boats on the high seas—overconfidence became so pronounced that war production fell off. In two months, June and July, 1943, more than a thousand airplanes that could have been made and should have been made were not made. Those who failed to make them were not on strike. They were merely saying, "The war's in the bag—so let's relax."

That attitude on the part of anyone—Government or management or labor—can lengthen this war. It can kill American boys.

Let us remember the lessons of 1918. In the summer of that year the tide turned in favor of the Allies. But this Government did not relax. In fact, our national effort was stepped up. In August, 1918, the draft age limits were broadened from 21-31 to 18-45. The President called for "force to the utmost," and his call was heeded. And in November, only three months later, Germany surrendered.

That is the way to fight and win a war—all out—and not with half-an-eye on the battlefronts abroad and the other eye-and-a-half on personal, selfish or political interests here at home.

Recommendations Made

Therefore, in order to concentrate all our energies and resources on winning the war, and to maintain a fair and stable economy at home, I recommend that the Congress adopt:

(1) A realistic tax law—which will tax all unreasonable profits, both individual and corporate, and reduce the ultimate cost of the war to our sons and daughters. The tax bill now under consideration by the Congress does not begin to meet this test.

(2) A continuation of the law for the renegotiation of war contracts—which will prevent exorbitant profits and assured fair prices to the Government. For two long years I have pleaded with the Congress to take undue profits out of war.

(3) A cost of food law—which will enable the Government (a) to place a reasonable floor under the prices the farmer may expect for his production; and (b) to place a ceiling on the prices a consumer will have to pay for the food he buys. This should apply to necessities only; and will require public funds to carry out. It will cost in appropriations about 1 per cent of the present annual cost of the war.

(4) Early reenactment of the stabilization statute of October 1942. This expires June 30, 1944, and if it is not extended well in advance, the country might just as well expect price chaos by Summer.

We cannot have stabilization by wishful thinking. We must take positive action to maintain the integrity of the American dollar.

National Service Law

(5) A national service law—which, for the duration of the war, will prevent strikes, and, with certain appropriate exceptions, will make available for war production or for any other essential services every able-bodied adult in this Nation.

These five measures together form a just and equitable whole. I would not recommend a national service law unless the other laws were passed to keep down the cost of living, to share equitably the burdens of taxation, to hold the stabilization line, and to prevent undue profits.

The Federal Government already has the basic power to draft capital and property of all kinds for war purposes on a basis of just compensation.

As you know, I have for three years hesitated to recommend a National Service Act. Today, however, I am convinced of its necessity. Although I believe that we and our Allies can win the war without such a measure, I am certain that nothing less than total mobilization of all our resources of manpower and capital will guarantee an earlier victory, and reduce the toll of suffering and sorrow and blood.

I have received a joint recommendation for this law from the heads of the War Department, the Navy Department and the Maritime Commission. These are the men who bear responsibility for the procurement of the necessary arms and equipment, and for the successful prosecution of the war in the field. They say:

"When the very life of the Nation is in peril the responsibility for service is common to all men and women. In such a time there can be no discrimination between the men and women who are assigned by the Government to its defense at the battle front and the men and women assigned to producing the vital materials essential to successful military operations. A prompt enactment of a national service law would be merely an expression of the universality of this responsibility."

I believe the country will agree that those statements are the solemn truth.

The Democratic Way

National service is the most democratic way to wage a war. Like selective service for the armed forces, it rests on the obligation of each citizen to serve his Nation to his utmost where he is best qualified.

It does not mean reduction in wages. It does not mean loss of retirement and seniority rights and benefits. It does not mean that any substantial numbers of war workers will be disturbed in their present jobs. Let these facts be wholly clear.

Experience in other democratic nations at war—Britain, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand—has shown that the very existence of national service makes unnecessary the widespread use of compulsory power. National service has proven to be a unifying moral force—based on an equal and comprehensive legal obligation of all people in a nation at war.

There are millions of American men and women who are not in this war at all. It is not because they do not want to be in it. But they want to know where they can best do their share. National service provides that direction. It will be a means by which every man and woman can find that inner satisfaction which comes from making the fullest possible contribution to victory.

Civilian War Workers

I know that all civilian war workers will be glad to be able to say many years hence to their grandchildren: "Yes, I, too, was in service in the great war. I was on duty in an airplane factory, and I helped make hundreds of fighting planes. The Government told me that in doing that I was performing my most useful work in the service of my country."

It is argued that we have passed the stage in the war where national service is necessary. But our soldiers and sailors know that this is not true. We are going forward on a long, rough road—and, in all journeys, the last miles are the hardest. And it is for that final effort—for the total defeat of our enemies—that we must mobilize our total resources. The national war program calls for the employment of more people in 1944 than in 1943.

It is my conviction that the American people will welcome this win-the-war measure which is based on the eternally just principle of "fair for one, fair for all."

It will give our people at home the assurance that they are standing four-square behind our soldiers and sailors. And it will give our enemies demoralizing assurance that we mean business—that we, 130,000,000 Americans, are on the march to Rome, Berlin and Tokyo.

I hope that the Congress will recognize that, although this is a political year, national service is an issue which transcends politics. Great power must be used for great purposes.

Nonpartisan Measure

As to the machinery for this measure, the Congress itself should determine its nature—but it should be wholly nonpartisan in its makeup.

Our armed forces are valiantly fulfilling their responsibilities to our country and our people. Now the Congress faces the responsibility for taking those measures which are essential to national security in this the most decisive phase of the nation's greatest war.

Several alleged reasons have prevented the enactment of legislation which would preserve for our soldiers and sailors and marines the fundamental perogative of citizenship—the right to vote. No amount of legalistic argument can becloud this issue in the eyes of these 10 million American citizens. Surely the signers of the Constitution did not intend a document which, even in wartime, would be construed to take away the franchise of any of those who are fighting to preserve the Constitution itself.

Our soldiers and sailors and marines know that the overwhelming majority of them will be deprived of the opportunity to vote, if the voting machinery is left exclusively to the States under existing State laws—and that there is no likelihood of these laws being changed in time to enable them to vote at the next election. The Army and Navy have reported that it will be impossible effectively to administer 48 different soldier-voting laws. It is the duty of the Congress to remove this unjustifiable discrimination against the men and women in our armed forces—and to do it as quickly as possible.

For a Lasting Peace

It is our duty now to begin to lay the plans and determine the strategy for the winning of a lasting peace and the establishment of an American standard of living higher than ever before known. We cannot be content, no matter how high that general standard of living may be, if some fraction of our people—whether it be one-third or one-fifth or one-tenth is ill-fed, ill-clothed, ill-housed and insecure.

This Republic had its beginning, and grew to its present strength, under the protection of certain inalienable political rights—among them the right of free speech, free press, free worship, trial by jury, freedom from unreasonable searches and seizures. They were our rights to life and liberty.

As our Nation has grown in size and stature, however—as our industrial economy expanded—these political rights proved inadequate to assure us equality in the pursuit of happiness.

We have come to a clear realization of the fact that true individual freedom cannot exist without economic security and independence. "Necessitous men are not free men." People who are hungry and out of a job are the stuff of which dictatorships are made.

"Second Bill of Rights"

In our day these economic truths have become accepted as self-evident. We have accepted, so to speak, a second Bill of Rights under which a new basis of security and prosperity can be established for all—regardless of station, race or creed.

Among these are:

The right to a useful and remunerative job in the industries, or shops or farms or mines of the Nation;

The right to earn enough to provide adequate food and clothing and recreation;

The right of every farmer to raise and sell his products at a return which will give him and his family a decent living;

The right of every businessman, large and small, to trade in an atmosphere of freedom from unfair competition and domination by monopolies at home or abroad:

The right of every family to a decent home;

The right to adequate medical care and the opportunity to achieve and enjoy good health;

The right to adequate protection from the economic fears of old age, sickness, accident and unemployment;

The right to a good education.

All of these rights spell security. And after this war is won we must be prepared to move forward, in the implementation of these rights, to new goals of human happiness and well-being.

Security at Home

America's own rightful place in the world depends in large part upon how fully these and similar rights have been carried into practice for our citizens. For unless there is security here at home there cannot be lasting peace in the world.

One of the great American industralists of our day—a man who has rendered yeoman service to his country in this crisis—recently emphasized the grave dangers of "rightist reaction" in this Nation. All clear-thinking businessmen share his concern. Indeed, if such reaction should develop—if history were to repeat itself and we were to return to the so-called "normalcy" of the 1920's—then it is certain that even though we shall have conquered our enemies on the battlefields abroad, we shall have yielded to the spirit of fascism here at home.

I ask the Congress to explore the means for implementing this economic bill of rights—for it is definitely the responsibility of the Congress so to do. Many of these problems are already before committees of the Congress in the form of proposed legislation. I shall from time to time communicate with the Congress with respect to these and further proposals. In the event that no adequate program of progress is evolved, I am certain that the Nation will be conscious of the fact.

"Selfish Pressure Groups"

Our fighting men abroad—and their families at home—expect such a program and have the right to insist upon it. It is to their demands that this Government should pay heed rather than to the whining demands of selfish pressure groups who seek to feather their nests while young Americans are dying.

The foreign policy that we have been following—the policy that guided us at Moscow, Cairo and Teheran—is based on the common sense principle which was best expressed by Benjamin Franklin on July 4, 1776: "We must all hang together, or assuredly we shall all hang separately."

I have often said that there are no two fronts for America in this war. There is only one front. There is one line of unity which extends from the hearts of the people at home to the men of our attacking forces in our farthest outposts. When we speak of our total effort, we speak of the factory and the field and the mine as well as of the battleground—we speak of the soldier and the civilian, the citizen and his Government.

Each and every one of us has a solemn obligation under God to serve this Nation in its most critical hour—to keep this Nation great—to make this Nation greater in a better world.

Taxes And Economy

By Ernest Lindley

Budget Affected By Wage Prices

WITH THE presentation of the budget, the so-called "economy bloc" in Congress may be expected to go into action again. Proposed expenditures should be and will be closely examined by the appropriate subcommittees and committees. As a rule there is no duty which Congress performs, through its committees, at greater length or in greater detail, unless it is the writing of tax bills.

But the savings obtained by congressional examination of the budget and ensuing appropriation bills almost certainly will be very small. For the nonwar part of the budget will be, relatively, quite small, as it was last year and the year before. Owing to the final liquidation or severe curtailment of certain agencies holding over from the prewar depression period, the percentage of the budget, apart from interest on the Federal debt, devoted to nonwar activities probably will be even smaller this time than in preceding war budgets.

CONGRESS CANNOT make real savings in the war budget except at the peril of interfering with the successful prosecution of the war—a risk which, in the showdown, few members are willing to take. By any test, there is bound to be waste in war expenditures, but usually it is not evident until later. And then what looks like waste often was essential, in the sober judgment of the officials responsible for the prosecution of the war. Facilities and installations have been built which, owing to changes in the fortunes or techniques of war, have proved unnecessary. Costs often have been high, and often they will continue to be high because things must be built or transported in a hurry. The judgment as to necessity must lie with the men who direct the war effort day by day.

The only way to cut down in an important measure the size of the Federal budget is to win the war as soon as possible. In terms of the Federal finances as a whole, the parings of the "economy bloc" are meaningless.

LAST YEAR some of the "economy bloc" members sought to give the impression that budget-shaving was an alternative to higher taxes. That, of course, was not the case. Some of the figures used to support the argument were entirely misleading and, in any well-run business, would have brought about the removal of those who used them for incompetence, if not a worse offense.

The size of the deficit next year and perhaps for several years thereafter will not be appreciably affected by the "economy bloc." It will be affected very substantially by taxation. Curiously, many Senators and Representatives who express deep concern about the deficit when they examine appropriation bills find it nothing to give a second thought to when they are considering taxes.

The size of the budget as a whole, not only next year but for several years thereafter and perhaps even longer, will be measurably affected by the wage-price level. A fractional rise in this level would wipe out all the savings the "economy bloc" has made since the war began. There will be more than a tiny rise if the members who have been attacking the present wage-price line are successful.

The true economy bloc consists of those members of the Senate and House who have done their utmost to combat inflation and to uphold the hands of those who have the responsibility for winning the war as quickly as possible. They have, in addition, opposed such hand-outs from the Federal Treasury as are called for by the amendments to the Renegotiation Act passed by the House and amplified by the Senate Finance Committee. They have fought for higher taxes. The number of members of the national legislature who can pass these tests is not large, and it includes very few of those who talk most about economy.

D. C., 2 States Get Stepped-Up Bond Quotas

Stepped-up quotas for the District, Maryland and Virginia on war bond sales to individuals during the first two weeks of the Fourth War Loan drive, opening next Tuesday, were assigned yesterday by the Treasury Department.

The Nation-wide goal for individual sales has been set at $5,500,000,000, 500 millions more than the Third Loan quota and 123 millions more than was subscribed during the last drive.

Of the 95 million dollars to be raised in bonds here from January 18 to February 15, 53 millions are scheduled to be subscribed by February 1. The quota is 3 millions above the Third War Loan quota and 10 millions above sales recorded in the September drive.

Fourth War Loan quotas, Third War Loan quotas and Third War Loan sales, compared by the Treasury Department, for Maryland are 13 million, 84 million, 95 million. For Virginia, 78 million, 74 million and 68 million.

Meanwhile, personal solicitation was cited as the most effective method of selling war bonds by the Treasury Department on the basis of a survey made after the Third War Loan drive.

The survey indicated, it was said, that half of the Nation's workers were reached through personal solicitation and that, of these, 59 per cent purchased extra bonds while only 18 per cent of those not personally solicited did so.

It was also disclosed that people are more easily persuaded to subscribe while at work than at home.

Women Voters Open Drive for Better Housing

The Voteless District League of Women Voters yesterday initiated a campaign for better housing in Washington at a "kick-off" luncheon meeting at the YWCA, attended by more than 150 women and community leaders.

As a preview to speeches by William H. Carey, jr., District director of sanitation, and Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau, a series of pictures was shown, illustrating the theme, "They Are Our Slums."

Captain Milliken, disclaiming the position of terming the slums a mere Negro problem, cited a number of instances in her experience which proved the close connection of delinquency to bad housing.

"You can't have children living like animals," she pointed out, "and expect them to live and grow up as decent citizens."

Mrs. Eugene Duffield, president, in answer to questions from the floor, declared that members of the league will meet with "neighborhood organizations" with the view of "learning and spreading the facts of housing." Among the league's plans is the attempt to have the Federation of Citizens' Associations reconsider its resolution asking abolition of the National Capital Housing Authority on the ground that it was "railroaded" through the assembly.

Congress Again Asked to License D. C. Undertakers

The Commissioners asked Congress again yesterday to give them authority to license and regulate the undertaking and embalming business in the District.

The draft of a bill sent to Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee for introduction would fix minimum standards of education and experience for applicants for licenses, and create a regulatory committee of seven members. One would be the health officer or a deputy who would serve in an ex-officio capacity.

The Commissioners told McCarran that under existing law "all that one has to do to engage in the business or profession is to register his name with the health department, without any other proof that he is qualified."

Two years ago the Senate passed a bill to give the Commissioners the authority they have asked again, but it died in the House.

Citizen Unit Asks Trolley-Bus Pass Be Sold for Dollar

The Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association, meeting last night at the home of its president, Mrs. Ella Thompson, 1536 16th st. nw., passed a resolution requesting that the Capital Transit Co. reduce the price of its weekly pass from $1.25 to $1, and that it sell tokens at the rate of four for 30 cents instead of the current exchange of three for a quarter.

In another action, the association called on the National Capital Housing Authority to devote its activity to slum clearance rather than to suburban housing projects. In a third resolution, the association deplored the recent waste in unsold Christmas trees and asked the commissioners to see that it was not duplicated next year.

Lewis A. Baumann Resigns OPA Post

Lewis A. Baumann, chief of the fats, oils and dairy products rationing branch, OPA, has resigned effective January 31 to return to private industry, the agency announced yesterday.

Baumann was associated with Southern Dairies here before entering Government service in January, 1942. His successor has not been appointed.

Citizens Meet Despite Order, Wender Says

Describing the controversy between citizen associations and the order of the Board of Recreation restricting meeting places for them as a "tempest in a teapot," Harry Wender, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations and chairman of the Recreation Board, declared yesterday that "but one and a half organizations" had been forced to cancel meetings.

In figures released last week, the board revealed that 10 organizations had canceled meetings since Milo Christiansen, recreation superintendent, had ordered that schools could not be opened for a meeting of less than 25 persons.

Five of the organizations canceled meetings in school buildings for other reasons before the controversy arose and are meeting elsewhere, officials pointed out yesterday at a meeting of the board.

Three more, the Forest Hill, the Manor Park, and the Summit Park canceled because they objected to a proposed change of location of meetings, and two canceled for the duration.

In describing the latter two, Wender declared that he had no knowledge of one and that the other was but "half an organization."

The board while voting to send a letter of explanation to T. Paul Mudd, chairman of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, explaining Christiansen's order, announced that 22 associations were still meeting in their original locations, seven without heat, and that three, the Brightwood Citizens Association, the Hampshire Heights Citizen's Association, and the Progressive Citizzens Association of Georgetown were seeking new locations.

Mrs. G. H. Chase to Head Visiting Nurse Society

Mrs. G. Howland Chase, 1555 35th st. nw., was elected president for 1944 of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society. The election was held yesterday at the organization's headquarters, 810 Albee Building.

'43 Death Rate May Be Lowest In D. C. History

Despite wartime conditions, preliminary 1943 reports of the District Health Department indicate even lower death rates than in the preceding year—the lowest in history.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland said yesterday that insofar as death rates are indices, Washington's health situation is at present most favorable and the future points to more progress.

The estimates for last year given by the Health Department listed the general death rate at 10.8 for 1000 population. If this figure proves correct, the rate has dropped 24.5 per cent in the District since 1935 as compared with a decrease of 5.5 per cent in the United States as a whole for the same period.

Infant mortality for the District last year was estimated at 40 per 1000 population and maternal mortality was 1.8, also less than the preceding year. Tuberculosis caused 65 deaths per 100,000 persons and pneumonia 60 deaths.

Tax Statement Leads to Flood of Unwanted Checks

By the Associated Press

It would seem that a lot of people either have guilty consciences, are easy spenders or are just superpatriotic.

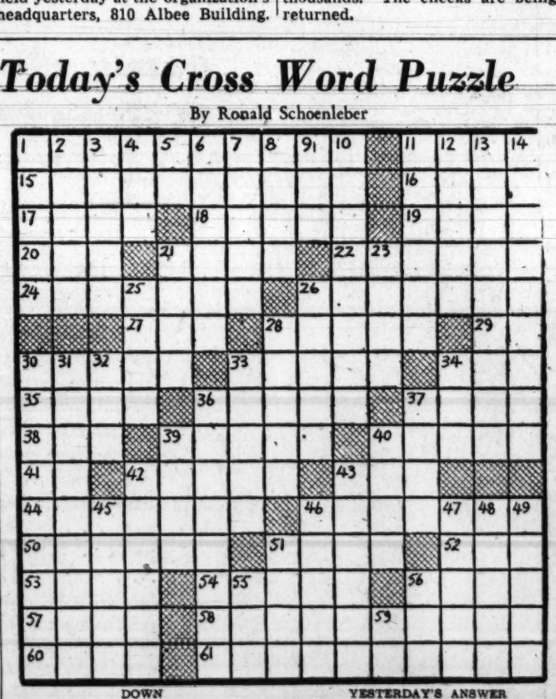

Because of the intricacies of the March income tax returns which call for all sorts of figures, including what your 1942 tax bill was, the Internal Revenue Bureau decided to enclose a statement with the new forms showing the amount of the taxpayer's 1942 bill together with credits entered for payments made before inauguration of pay-as-you-go last July.

Many persons interpreted the statement as a dun, subtracted the unpaid portion and mailed a check —without a squawk.

The bureau made no tabulation but said the number ran into the thousands. The checks are being returned.

Scouts Praised, Others Sought To Aid Drive for Wastepaper

"Boy Scouts of the National Capital Area Council can be very proud of their own paper salvage program," their Scout executive, Linn C. Drake, maintained in a bulletin issued yesterday to all troops and packs in the area.

But he pointed out the Scouts can do "a much better job" as he called upon more troops to enlist in the campaign, sponsored jointly by the D. C. Salvage Committee and The Washington Post. Approximately 40 troops and packs have registered during the past month, leaving about 340 more groups who are still organizing or have not yet geared for participation in the all-out paper salvage drive.

Mills Shut Down

Drake asserted, "Your plans must be perfected now. Our boys cannot wait for their supplies. Their supplies are shipped in paper containers and paper board. Mills are shut down. Our individual troop and Boy Scout effort can reopen many of these mills.

"What is going to be the answer from your troop," Drake asked Washington area scouts, in conclusion.

Included in the bulletin was an excerpt from an editorial in the Bellevue Scouter, a paper published by Troop 64. Scout Allen Kramer wrote:

"As you all know (I hope) several factories have had to shut down because of lack of old newspapers and other scrap. This material is absolutely essential. It plays an enormous part in winning the war for our very salvation. It is up to patriotic organiations to get in the scrap. The foremost of these organiations is the Boy Scouts of America. That means you and me. We must not let our country down.

Depots A Problem

"So far we have been one of the leading organizations in the District of Columbia, probably in the whole United States. As long as we keep it up we are helping to bring about total victory. So let's not lag behind."

The bulletin also advised troops which have received a temporary setback in their salvage organization because they are unable to establish an accumulation depot that investigation of private garages, home basements, business establishments, apartment house basements and such should produce a suitable site.

Telephone Poll Used to Get Fast Action on Bill

A new record for speed was established yesterday by the House District Committe when it favorably reported within 24 hours after introduction a bill that would authorize the Bureau of National Affairs, Inc., to place pneumatic tube lines under 23d st. nw. between M and N sts.

Committee approval of the measure was given, not at a meeting, but by a telephone poll of the members conducted by Miss Mabel Haller, committee clerk.

At the first opportunity Chairman Randolph will ask the House to interrupt discussions of national and international problems long enough to pass the bill.

Brazilian Force To Join Invasion

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 11 (AP).—A Brazilian expeditionary force will leave "in the first months of this year in order to participate in the invasion of Europe," War Minister Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra declared today. A unit of airmen already has left, going to the United States for final training.

Southern Group For NCHH Abolition

The Southeast Business Men's Association Monday night added its approval to a report of the D. C. Federation of Citizens Associations and the Southeast Council, calling for the abolishment of the National Capital Housing Agency in favor of private housing.

The group adopted the report after testimony from a committee appointed to investigate District housing conditions asserted that the NCHA "is not doing the work for which Congress created it."

The association charged that although the organization was set up to eliminate alley housing and erect new family units in its stead, only 10 per cent of Washington's alley areas have been cleared. It was further stated that the NCHA has begun building in residential areas without consideration for residents' views on the situation, causing property values to be lowered.

MEAT
the yardstick of protein foods

This Seal means that all nutritional statements made in this advertisement are acceptable to the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association.

Since it cut this country out of the wilderness, the American family has always reached for the true, the genuine and the virile . . . We were never a bland people . . . Our wives and mothers plan our meals around flavor—by preference the flavor of meat . . .

Speaking to one of our food agency officials, a British Cabinet Officer said:

"A lot of our people (civilians) look as though they are in very good shape. They are, but they don't have the vitality or staying power. They need more protein. You send us the meat and we will increase our war production 15 to 20 per cent."

Today proteins are the talk of the nutrition world.

The reason is: proteins are—

Much of the substance we're made of.

The material out of which children add new inches and pounds.

The substance with which the human machine is kept up and repaired.

There is no way to get proteins except in the foods we eat. We need them constantly.

What's the difference between the best proteins and other proteins?

Proteins are made up of mysterious substances called "amino acids" (pronounced "a-mee-no"). And, by the way, they aren't "acids" as you usually think of acids.

Every protein food has its own special pattern of amino acids. No two are exactly the same.

Of the 22 amino acids which occur in foods, there are 10 which are essential to keeping the human body going just right. That's because the body itself cannot manufacture these ten.

And that's why meat is such an amazing food. Nature's laboratories have concentrated in it a virtually perfect protein and have given it a flavor which has said "Come on and eat" to the human race since the Dawn of Eating.

That's why meat usually is regarded as "the yardstick of protein foods."

Meat is also an excellent source of essential B vitamins (thiamine, riboflavin, niacin) and contains important minerals (iron, copper, phosphorus).

All meats, regardless of kind, cuts, prices or point values, contain these essential nutrients.

Extend the meat you get. Use low-point cuts. Combine them with other good protein foods—milk, poultry, fish, eggs and cheese. In any event, keep up on proteins.

NOW You get 2 brown points and 4c for every pound of waste fat. Your country needs it for ammunition. Turn it in!

Bullis Hands Coolidge First Defeat, 30 to 29

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

This is no gag. A fighter wants to fight for nothing. He is Frankie Wills, who is sorry he didn't please Washington fans in his last appearance, a dull fight in which he beat Charley Bennett, and so he wants to turn over the total amount of his next purse to any worthy charity, preferably the President's Birthday Paralysis Fund.

POVICH

Wills made the offer yesterday through his manager, Bo Bregman, who says no opponents are barred. "Wills wasn't satisfied to get the decision over Bennett," says Bregman. "He knows it was a bad fight, that the customers didn't like it, and he wants to make amends somehow. I suggested that he give his next purse to charity and that's what he wants to do."

Which seems to put it up to the Washington promoters, who have Wills easily available. Against the proper kind of oponent, Wills' percentage of the purse could hit $1000, which he is willing to kiss off for charity. He's that eager to reestablish himself in the affections of Washington fans.

Wills has had a strange career in the District rings. Against good fighters, he fights well and acts like a contender for the welterweight title. Against fighters he is suposed to lick, Wills reverts to a fumbling, plodding hack. "I want to put him in a charity show," says Bregman, "because he always fights well when he has incentive. We'll pay his training expenses, and he won't take a dime for himself."

The best-looking piece of fighting flesh on the local boxing front, though, seems to be a light-skinned Negro lad named Aaron Perry, who has never been licked as yet and in eight fights has won seven by knockouts.

Perry's latest victim was Red Brown, a last-minute substitute for Herbert Samuels the other night at Uline's Arena. Brown wasn't exactly a nonentity. In his last fight he knocked out Don Neil in four rounds. But Perry put Brown away in the second round with a right-hand clout to the jaw that rendered the count of 10 superfluous.

Perry is in good hands, too. He is under the aegis of the veteran Harry Garsh, who is no green pea in the fight business. Garsh had the good colored lightweight Bruce Flowers years ago. Flowers was a very profitable meal-ticket and just missed winning the lightweight championship. Garsh believes he has another Flowers in Perry.

It was a year ago that Garsh wandered into the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A., where the colored amateur fighters foregather, and surveyed the talents of a score of youths punching the bags. He was smitten immediately with the talents of the strongly-built Perry, then a 17-year-old.

He singled out Perry and talked to him and learned that the lad was serious about wanting to be a fighter. "Not just a fighter though, I got to be a champion," the boy told Garsh. Perry was deadly serious about his boxing, Garsh learned, and he signed him to a contract. Other fight managers have been regarding the Garsh-Perry tieup covetously ever since.

In the ring, Perry is a fast-moving, stand-up hitter with authority in either hand. He has never been on the floor. But that he can hit was demonstrated the other night in his fight with Taffy Cummings, tough little British sailor who in 23 fights has never been knocked out. Perry didn't stop Cummings, but he had him on the deck twice.

Perry was in the semifinal the other night when Billy Banks and Vic Creelman were fighting ostensibly for the privilege of meeting Sammy Angott in a bout at Ulines. But at the end of the night's program, the Uline customers were agreeing that the lad they'd like to see in there against Angott is neither Creelman or Banks, but Perry.

He won't be rushed along, though. Gash is content to let Perry fight in the semiwindups for another year, if necessary. "He has plenty of time," says Garsh. The rub is, though, that the Army may be getting interested in Perry. "Maybe he'll deserve one big shot before he goes in," says Garsh. "He's almost ready to lick anybody his weight."

Knox Praises Football at Annual Fete

By Shirley Povich

Beneath be-ribboned goal posts that framed the speakers dais, Navy Secretary Frank Knox and a glittering array of generals and admirals last night paid ringing tributes to football at the annual dinner of the Touchdown Club of Washington.

Introduced by Touchdown Club President Robert Simmons to the 1000 guests as "the man who has done more to preserve football during wartime than any other man in the United States," Secretary Knox declared:

"The Navy believes in the type of sport that involves body contact. We are fighting a desperate war. This is a war in which you kill or get killed, and nothing better prepares a man for that kind of a war, especially the war in the Pacific, than the kind of training you get on the football field."

Difference of Opinion

Secretary Knox vigorously defended the Navy's inclusion of football in its college training program last year to the constant cheers of the assemblage in the Statler Hotel's Embassy room. "I have the greatest respect and affection of the Secretary of War, and most of the time we think alike," he said, "but on the question of maintaining football in our services, we differ."

Declaring there is a direct relationship to physical condition and physical courage, Secretary Knox asserted, "only those men are fit to be free who can fight to win and maintain their freedom. The price of freedom is the ability to defend it.

Force Behind the Peace

"This is a truth forced upon us as never before. We have learned in this war that reliances on paper promises to keep peace aren't worth the paper they are written on. We have learned to rely on the kind of peace that has the force behind it to maintain it."

Lieut. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, commandant of the Marines who made the presentation of the Touchdown Club's Walter Camp Memorial trophy to Marine Pvt. Angelo Bertelli, formerly of Notre Dame, recalled the Marines' triumphs on Guadalcanal and declared:

"I have found that the man who thinks quickly on the football field, thinks quickly in the jungle and on the field of battle. It is a pleasure to welcome Private Bertelli from one fighting team, Notre Dame, to another fighting team, the United States Marines."

Pass-Halsey to Baugh

Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of the South Pacific area, made the presentation on the Touchdown trophy awarded Sammy Baugh as the outstanding professional player of the year.

In a special shortwave broadcast to the men overseas, Admiral Halsey paid vigorous tribute "to the fighting men of all our forces all over the world and especially to my fighting team of the South Pacific. Congratulations on what you are doing to the yellow monkeys—and continue making them good Japs."

Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell made the award to West Point Cadet Casimir Myslinski as the outstanding college lineman of the year. Myslinski, captain and center of the Army team, was popular choice in the Touchdown Club balloting.

The trophy to Ensign Dick Todd of Great Lakes, former Redskin back, as the outstanding service player of the year was presented by Admiral Russell R. Waesche, commandant of the Coast Guard.

Admiral Land Makes Award

Admiral Emory S. Land, chief of the United States Maritime Service and past president of the Touchdown Club, made the award to Ossie Bluege of the Washington baseball club as the outstanding manager of the year.

Other trophies presented. The Arch McDonald award to the outstanding local college player of the year, to Ed Hurson of Maryland U; the Touchdown Club awards to the outstanding high school and prep school football players, to John Shullenbarger of Coolidge High, and Clyde Scott of Bullis Prep. Honored as the most valuable players on their respective college teams were Vince Coppola of Georgetown; Stanley Levin of George Washington U., Ed Hurson of Maryland and John Mercak of Catholic U.

Nine Chosen First Time on Major All-Stars

St. Louis, Jan. 11 (AP).—Reflecting the great changes in baseball resulting from the war, the 1943 all-star team, announced today by the Sporting News, includes nine players chosen for the first time by members of the Baseball Writers' Association.

Only Morton Cooper, the St. Louis Cardinals' pitcher, held over from the 1942 team, while Luke Appling, shortstop of the Chicago White Sox and the American League's batting champion, came back after having been named previously in 1936 and 1940.

The virtually complete remaking of the team brought initial recognition to such established players as Billy Herman of the Brooklyn Dodgers, Rudy York of the Detroit Tigers and Billy Nicholson of the Chicago Cubs, who had failed to make the grade in previous seasons.

Walker Cooper of the Cardinals was selected the catcher to form an all-star brother battery with Morton Cooper.

Stan Musial, St. Louis Cardinals (217), center field.
Bill Nicholson, Chicago Cubs (129), right field.
Rudy York, Detroit Tigers (165), first base.
Billy Herman, Brooklyn Dodgers (128), second base.
Luke Appling, Chicago White Sox (131), shortstop.
Bill Johnson, New York Yankees (109), third base.
Walker Cooper, St. Louis Cardinals (158), catcher.
Spurgeon Chandler, New York Yankees (215), Morton Cooper, St. Louis Cardinals (197), and Truett Sewell, Pittsburgh Pirates (182), pitchers.

Leone Returns Tonight Against The Yellow Mask

Leone and The Yellow Mask grappled here several weeks ago at the Arena, with the Mystery Man winning after a bruising battle.

In the semiwindup Don Evans will meet Maurice LaChappelle.

An interesting 30-minute scrap is expected to evolve from the meeting of Johnny Long and Mike DeMetra. Long, a Baltimore shipyard worker, was a two-man teammate of LaChappelle last week when they defeated DeMetra and John Vansky.

George Macricostas will tackle Dick Bishop, while The Black Mask will meet Ed (Strangler) White, the first bout at 8:45.

Uline Fractures Arm; Falls on Ice

Miguel J. Uline, owner of Uline's Arena, was confined to his Broadmoor Hotel quarters yesterday with a fractured arm and slight concussion following a heavy fall suffered while crossing the ice of his arena last Sunday.

He was crossing the ice to converse with some friends, when he fell heavily to the ice. He returned to his living quarters under his own power, but X-ray pictures revealed the fractured arm and other injuries.

Williams Decisions Outclassed Hubert

By Walter Haight

I don't know where Tiger Flowers is buried, but that great Negro fighter must be whirling dervish in his grave. Somebody had the nerve to refer to one Tee Hubert as "a second Tiger Flower" at Turner's Arena last night. Hubert didn't fit either of the names. As a tiger he wasn't even a respectable alley cat and about the only flower he can be compared with is stinkweed.

Holman Williams, using Hubert as a punching bag when he could catch up with him, banged out a unanimous decision. The good middleweight used the 10-rounder as a sharpener for his coming duration championship battle with Jake La Motta next month.

Hubert, winner of nine straight here, was on a bicycle for eight rounds. His offense consisted of waving gloves at Williams and his defense was a weak attempt to keep Williams from cutting up his face.

Showed Fight in Eighth

Hubert finally showed some semblance of fight in the last two rounds, but by this time Williams was farther out in front than my belt buckle. Williams was a 1-5 favorite and won breezing. He had a crouching style that bewildered Hubert.

Fortunately, not many people saw the main go, although the supporting card was the best of the season. Some 1300 fans paid $1790 into the till.

Ancient Mollis Wins

Tommy Mollis, 156, ancient Baltimorean, and Bobby Brown, 160 of Washington met for the second time in two weeks here, and the fans don't mind if they clash on every show. Mollis, said to have been a sparring partner for Thor in 445 B. C., repeated his victory over Brown in a rough, tough battle which had the fans on their feet from start to finish. Mollis' bag of tricks was too much for the rugged Brown.

Harry Diduck, 134, had the best of the infighting against Don Bocala, 135, and carried off the decision in their battle, while Al White, 140, decisioned George Farrell, 140, in the opener.

Former Post Man, Jack Bell, to Speak To Walton League

Jack Bell, former Washington Post fishing editor who has just returned from Brazil, will address the monthly meeting of the District chapter of the Izaak Walton League at the Willard Hotel at 8 p. m. tonight.

Bell, a former president of the local Walton League, went to Brazil with the U. S. Rubber Development Corp., and has a world of tales to tell about the fish he encountered on the upper Amazon.

Just plain ordinary fishermen, as well as members of the league, are invited to attend.

Sports Face Showdown in Service Law

President Roosevelt's recommendation for a national service law may bring to a final decision whether sports is essential to the war effort—a verdict long sought in the sports world and in Congress.

Representative Weiss (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, leader of a group of legislators which has been striving to have sports so classified, said last night that if such a law is passed it "will bring a definite showdown," the Associated Press reported.

A service law would mean that athletes, as well as all other able-bodied persons, would be liable to specific war-effort assignments in war production plants. Thus, if—say—professional baseball is to survive next summer, someone in authority must rule a ball player essential to the war effort for the sake of civilian morale.

Weiss and his group say it goes farther than civilian morale—that the soldiers and sailors want sports continued, want to know how the Dodgers are doing before they ask anything else of visitors to the battlefronts.

"We've never been able to get those in charge to say definitely, one way or the other, how sports is classified," said Weiss. Himself a professional football referee and former backfield star at Duquesne University.

Weiss said Paul McNutt, War Manpower commissioner, "wouldn't say sports was essential and he wouldn't say it wasn't essential."

The Army has refused to permit trainees at colleges to take part in varsity football on the ground that they didn't have time. The Navy has allowed this.

St. Alban's Tips Devitt, 33-31, In Overtime

"Cotton" Smith's goal from the side court lifted the St. Alban's basketball team to victory over Devitt, 33 to 31, in a three-overtime-period thriller at the St. Alban's gymnasium yesterday.

Smith, who scored 17 points in the contest, sank a series of goals in the final quarter of the regulation game to wipe out a 24-16 Devitt lead and tie the score at 29-29.

At the end of the first overtime period, the teams were locked in a 31-31 tie and a second overtime period brought no more scoring until Smith netted his decisive shot.

Georgetown Prep triumphed over Friends School, 32-12, with O'Donnell and Roberts the high point scorers, sinking them for eight apiece.

Led by Riley Diffie's 17 points, Bladensburg High opened its season with a 29-20 victory over Maryland Park on the latter's floor. Marks led the losers.

Interhigh Teams Take 3 of 5 Games

Five District high schools met three prep schools and two high schools from the suburban area yesterday and three of the interhigh teams were winners. Coolidge lost to Bullis by one point, Western thumped St. John's, Gonzaga swamped Central, Wilson trounced Montgomery Blair and Tech won over George Washington.

The Coolidge Colts, bolstered by four straight victories including one over Bullis, met the Silver Spring prep stars again yesterday and suffered their first defeat, 30-29, in the final 55 seconds of play. Bullis has lost only its previous game to Coolidge and one to the Navy Plebes.

McClure Star

It was a knock-down-drag-out affair from the start and the score stood 12-12 at the half. Bullis led, 26-23 as the final quarter began and made only 2 points more until the final minute of the game came up, while the Colts were climbing up to a 28-all deadlock. Then Bullis' Bill McClure sank a snowbird to make it 30-28. There was a wild flurry of action and the Colts' Addie Bassin was fouled, made the extra point, but it wasn't enough.

The Purple of Gonzaga turned on the power to defeat Central, which succumbed to Roosevelt's wiles last Saturday, by a 36-14 score. With a 14-5 score at the half, it was Gonzaga's all the way.

Western Wages Battle

The boys across the creek had no cinch in taking St. John's, 32-26, for the Johnnies had it over Western for the first half and led at that point, 14-10.

Wilson had the easiest time of it among the high schools in defeating visiting Montgomery Blair, 44-19, using 15 players againsts the outclassed Silver Spring quint. It was 22-14 at the half, and then the Tigers began to lengthen their lead. Stu Brown accounted for 17 of the Tiger points.

Tech pulled out of a 13-8 deficit at half time in beating George Washington on the winner's court. The Manual Trainers made it 24-all at the end of the third period, and used long passes and the fast break to outscore the Presidents in the fourth period. George Kranking's 11 points topped the Tech attack, while three players scored all the G. W. points—Joe Hensley, Steve Chalmers and Marshall Boaz.

Grand Jury Widens Probe In Kelly Case

The District grand jury inquiry into the Larry Kelly union embezzlement case is expected to widen today to another local of the Building Laborers Union. When the grand jury convenes it is to look into the union's affairs at Quantico, Va.

Subpenaed to appear before the body, according to Assistant U. S. Attorney John W. Fihelly, are Faust Moreschi, George W. Morgan, and Matthew Kiesgen.

Moreschi is the son of Joseph V. Moreschi, president of the powerful mother union, the International Hod Carriers, Building, and Common Laborers. Faust is president of the Laborers District Council here.

Morgan, financial secretary-treasurer of the local here, was one of those accused with Kelly of loose handling of union funds. He was suspended by the elder Moreschi, but later reinstated, although Kelly was ousted from the union.

Kiesgen is the brother of Kelly's first wife, and an agent of the District Council at La Plata, Md.

Kelly still is a fugitive from the grand jury, and a bench warrant is out for his arrest.

J. W. Christie, Armament Inventor, Dies

J. Walter Christie, 80, who spent the last 27 years of his life developing high speed military vehicles, died yesterday in a sparsely furnished house at 510 Broad st., Falls Church, Va., following several months' effort to collect a $40,000 claim before the War Department for tanks produced in 1920.

At the time of his death he and his widow, Mrs. Jeanett Christie, were in straitened circumstances. Eviction had been threatened from the little white house where Mr. Christie hoped to retire, according to his attorney, S. Wallace Dempsey, a former Congressman.

Turned Down Deal With Foes

Mrs. Christie said her husband had several opportunities to sell his military inventions to Germany and Japan but had refused. All the money paid to him for his inventions by the War Department estimated at more than one million dollars had been spent in further development of military mobile weapons, Mrs. Christie said.

At the time of his death Mr. Christie was working on a tank which could be attached to an airplane, as landing gear. The tank inventor also helped develop the motorized fire engine and, a turret track for battleships, when high explosives superseded smokeless powder in the Navy.

He contributed important developments of the four-wheel drive truck used in the Mexican expedition before World War I. He also developed mobile gun platforms for antiaircraft guns and larger artillery during that war.

Sought to Speed Up Tanks

Mr. Christie's main interest and efforts after the Armistice were centered in raising the speed of heavily armored military vehicles from the 4-mile per hour crawl of the early tanks to high speeds required by modern war. His great ambition, Mrs. Christie said, was to give American fighting men the weapons they need.

Funeral services and interment will be in River Edge, N. J., Mr. Christie's birthplace and boyhood home.

Mrs. Mary Ellen Gross

Requiem mass for Mrs. Mary Ellen Gross, 77 widow of Edward J. Gross, a Georgetown native, will be said tomorrow at 10 a. m. at Holy Trinity Church, preceded by funeral services at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lillian Kerns, 305 11th st. se., at 9 a. m. Mrs. Gross died there Monday. Interment will be at Holy Rood Cemetery.

Mrs. Gross, who was a graduate of St. Joseph's Catholic School, was a member of Holy Trinity parish until she moved to live with her youngest daughter. She is also survived by a son, Walter J. Gross of McLean, Va., and two other daughters, Mrs. Ellen Mueller and Mrs. Catherine Hannan. Other survivors are four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Charles King

London, Jan. 11 (INS).—Charles King, 55, American musical comedy star who also appeared in several screen productions, died today in a U. S. Army hospital in Britain of pneumonia.

King, who was born in New York City in 1889 and played in many Broadway musicals before taking up a career in Hollywood in the early days of talking pictures, fell ill with pneumonia after contracting a cold. He was performing for United States troops with a USO unit.

Mrs. Emma E. Normoyle

Funeral services for Mrs. Emma E. Normoyle, 77, widow of Maj. James E. Normoyle, will be held at noon today with burial in Arlington Cemetery. Mrs. Normoyle died Monday at Stamford, Conn.

Major Normoyle of the Quartermaster Corps, after whom the Normoyle Transport Camp at San Antonio, Tex., was named, was well known for his active work in the Mississippi flood of 1912. Mrs. Normoyle was a native of St. Louis, Mo.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Margaret N. Kuhn, wife of Col. R. Parker Kuhn, deputy chief of the Army Exchange Service.

Miss Cornelia I. Morgan

Funeral services for Miss Cornelia Irby Morgan, daughter of the late John Tyler Morgan, Senator from Alabama from 1887 to 1907, will be held tomorrow at 2226 20th st. nw.

A graduate of Mount Vernon Seminary, she served as president of the alumni association and treasurer of the Mount Vernon chapel.

Miss Morgan was a member of the City Club, the Colonial Dames of Washington and of the Colonial Dames of Alabama.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

National Service Law And the Federal Worker

A national service law—what would it mean to Federal workers? This question was on the minds of employes yesterday after the President threw his support behind a tell-'em-where-to-work bill. Briefly, here's how Civil Service officials say Federal employes would be affected: (1) No employe could quit his job unless he had the approval of his agency and the Civil Service Commission. An employe may now resign without a release, but he must wait at least 60 days before he can take another job. (2) An employe could be transferred to any other job in either Government or private industry against his wishes.

The truth is that Federal agencies many times have insisted on the transfer of employes against their wishes, but the Civil Service Commission has stepped in to block every single one. The commission has felt that it didn't have the authority to tell employes where they should work despite the fact that a War Manpower directive apparently gives it the power. It has insisted—and rightly so—that national service must be approved by Congress before it'll order a single Federal worker to take a job he doesn't want. When it's asked to testify on the bill, the commission will insist that a provision be added which would require Uncle Sam to pay all moving expenses of an employe and his family who is ordered to take a job against his wishes. The British have this feature in their universal conscription law.

All in all, a national service law would have a stabilizing effect on Federal employment. You'd have to keep your job whether you like it or not and until Uncle Sam permitted you to make a change. Another point: There would be fewer promotions if the bill is approved. Agencies now give employes promotions in order to keep them. This practice wouldn't be necessary under conscription legislation. Some employes yesterday felt that Federal employes would be exempted from the law, but Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee says there would be no chance of that. Ramspeck, in fact, questions the constitutionality of making people work for private employes, but he's sure it could be done in the Federal service.

Wallace Sayre is now almost certain to be appointed personnel director of Office of Price Administration. He's a former member of the New York Civil Service Commission and he has been working at OPA for a year . . . The annual budget which will be sent to Congress tomorrow will carry a big cut for the Agriculture Department. Only slight cuts will be made in the budgets of the other old-line agencies . . . Bob Williams, a staff member of the House Appropriations Committee, will enter the Navy next week as a lieutenant (j. g.) . . . The investigations division of the Office of Emergency Management will be abolished and most of its work will be taken over by the Civil Service Commission.

War Production Board employes now have music in the cafeteria during lunch hour. It's a swell idea and many private companies and Federal agencies outside Washington put in music long ago. . . . Three of Louisiana's largest dailies have former city editors working for Uncle Sam. They are George W. Healy, jr., of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, now with OWI; Dan E. Kelly of the Shreveport Times, acting chief of Navy's publications review section, and Ed Hebert of the New Orleans States, who is a member of the House. . . . United Federal Workers of America accuse Baltimore officials of Social Security's old age and survivors insurance with trying to intimidate employes who have protested alleged racial discrimination in the agency. The charge is denied flatly by SSB officials.

Senator Harry Truman of Missouri is a real possibility to be FDR's running mate on the Democratic ticket. . . . Harold Rowe, former chief of OPA's food rationing division, has completed a survey of the Government's food activities for Assistant President James Byrnes. Working under cover, Rowe has made checks on War Food, War and Navy Departments and Foreign Economic Administration. The Rowe report may be used by Byrnes to bring about policy changes. . . . Washington Civic Orchestra has several openings for Government employes who are musicians. Call George P. Jones at Ordway 6175 for further information.

Office of Strategic Services, the super-secret agency, has maps of all sizes, colors and places. Employes by the score study the maps daily, some of them by microscope. Quite a commotion was caused the other day when a map couldn't be found. It wasn't a secret war map but a map of Pennsylvania. . . . UFWA will stage a labor Information Please Friday night at 1212 18th st. nw. . . . Civil service again has warned Federal agencies to cut out the practice of trying to get employes pay raises by giving them high-sounding titles. It has called for simpler titles and understandable language in writing up classification job sheets. The civil service memo is in line with a similar recommendation made by the Ramspeck Committee. . . . The Ramspeck Committee, incidentally, wants to know what the Council of Personnel Administration has accomplished in its five years of existence.

Poll Shows Women Almost Solidly Opposed To Proposal for National Service Law

By Emily Towe

A cross-section of Washington women yesterday vigorously opposed the President's recommendation for a national service law that would make available for war production or other essential services every able-bodied adult in the Nation, including women, it was found in interviews.

When reminded that President Roosevelt had expressed the opinion that mobilization of manpower resources would guarantee an earlier victory and reduce suffering and death, some of them hesitantly said that perhaps in that case a labor draft law should be passed.

Mrs. E. T. Thorton, 6907 Brookville rd., Chevy Chase, a housewife and a volunteer worker at a canteen booth in a theater, said:

"Drafting women is carrying it as far as European countries. I certainly believe in women doing everything they can to help win the war. But I do not believe in drafting women for war plants."

Mrs. Anne Gore, of 1100 F st. ne., a manicurist: "I think the idea of drafting labor is great. Sure, I'd be willing to leave my job to work in a war plant if it would help win the war."

Miss Helen Walsh, 27, who manages her family farm on Viers Mill rd. near Rockville, Md.: "I'm against drafting women because it's not democratic. Even if the law would mean more farm workers for us, I still do not think Capitol Hill should legislate workers into jobs."

Mrs. Betty Kraft, 26, of 9700 Brunett st., Silver Spring, Md., an employe of the Government Patent Office: "I have a baby 14 months olds, and it seems that such a law would be hard on children because it might mean breaking up families. Drafting single girls would be all right, I believe."

Mrs. Nancy Payne, 22, department store saleslady: "I'm against drafting women in general. But if the President says it's necessary, perhaps it should be done."

Miss Shirley B. Moser, 25, ticket cashier at a theater: "I don't think they should draft women. You know, we're all temperamental souls and the armed forces have found that women in general don't work best under regimentation. But if the President says it will save lives and shorten the war, I suppose it will be all right."

Miss Verla Cutlip, 28 waitress at a midtown luncheon counter: "Yes. I think drafting women is a good idea. I'm for it, even if it means changing jobs."

Miss Delores Dumm, 21, 4318 9th st. nw., also an employe of the Patent Office: "I'm trying to do my part in the war by working for the Government instead of living at home in Altoona, Pa. Perhaps, a law like that would be all right for those not in essential work now."

Mrs. Agnes T. Shields, 3520 Connecticut ave. nw.: "It's a good idea for some women to be drafted. At my age, I don't think I could do anything except volunteer work. The President knows better than we do what is needed."

Mrs. Charles Holkins, 1709 N. Huntington st., Arlington, Va., mother of a 4-year-old boy: "I don't believe mothers should be separated from their young children, but I do favor the idea in general, particularly for those not now in war work."

Mrs. Arthur Mason, 3226 Martha Custis dr., Alexandria, a housewife: "Perhaps I would favor drafting women for war jobs. My husband is in the Navy and I want to be with him in this country. But if it's necessary to win the war, I guess I'd favor it."

Servicemen Quick to Voice Their Approval Of President's Proposal for Drafting of Labor

By Elwin Stouffer

Four out of five servicemen interviewed yesterday vehemently favored the President's national service legislation proposal. The same proportion prevailed among the average workingmen.

Corp. Robert F. Jacobs, 19, of 5113 Illinois ave. nw., at home on leave from his base in Fresno, Calif., said:

"I'm for it. It should be a law to stop strikes. There are too many strikes now and they're doing nothing but holding up the war effort." His twin brother, Corp. Harvey A. Jacobs, 19, asserted:

"I feel exactly the same as my twin."

Pfc. Herman A. Meyer, 22, a resident of New York City and stationed at the United States Naval Hospital at Bethesda, said:

"But suppose if this happens the drafted people start aquawking about wages and hours like they are doing now. I guess it all depends on who is running the show and how well they run it.

"I think that labor should run it. Labor is for the people and its the people who should have the say about what's going to happen to them. I guess the idea is to avoid strikes but people are people and I don't think they want to be regimented into anything. Come to think about it I guess it would develop into a worse mess than we have now."

Staff Sergt. Gregory E. Baaden, USA, passing through Washington from his base at Muroc, Calif., said:

"It might help in getting all these single guys with 2-B ratings off the streets and either into uniform or in some essential war industry. I've been traveling all over the country and have seen conditions in most large cities. Washington is the worst of any of them. I've seen more young fellows on the streets here who should be carrying a gun or making planes or tanks than I've seen anywhere.

"I think the President's suggestion would take them out of Washington and place them in towns where they are needed a lot more than they are here. Women should be drafted too."

Frank Squyer, USN, aviation radio technician from Dallas, Tex.:

"I went into the Navy before there was any draft. Since they did draft men out of good jobs I think there should be no restrictions of drafting both men and women into the civilian war effort. I'm not in favor of any kind of regimentation except in war. If this is the solution, use it and get the war over with."

Walter F. Maguire, 57 Bryant st. nw., bartender:

"I think it's a hell of a good thing. If I could fit in I want to be called wherever I'm needed. I don't know how sensible it would be to draft women, but every man between the ages of 21 to 65 should be made to do his part in the war effort."

Carmen Di Silvio, 1241½ D st. ne., taxidriver:

"That's a dictator's action. I don't believe in it even if I am from a foreign country. Of course, if it's a law I'll abide by it but it isn't fair. It's not America. What do we have a Congress for? I'm doing a necessary war job, my wife works in a department store and I think she's doing a necessary war job."

Allen Peterson, 224 Indiana ave., cook:

"I'm very much in accord with a national draft. I don't think it would eliminate strikes entirely but I do think it would retard them. Women shouldn't be spared either provided it didn't tear up their homes and break up families."

C. H. Pitts, 144 35th st. ne., barber:

"Since they are drafting so many men in the armed forces and since there are these strikes I believe that people on the home front—including women—should be forced to do their part in winning the war. I think the idea is sound and should be carried out as soon as possible."

Leonard Abrams, 507 14th st. nw., cobbler:

"I believe that a draft and classification of labor that would make certain types of labor available where it is needed should be made a law. I think that women should be drafted the same as men. It's a good idea and I'm for it."

Rotary Chief to Speak

Washington Rotarians will hear their international president, Charles L. Wheeler of San Francisco, at the club's weekly luncheon at 12:30 today at the Willard Hotel. His subject will be "Has Rotary a Place in World Affairs?"

WHEELER

All clubs in the Washington district from Virginia are expected to attend. Guests will include Representative Anderson (Democrat), New Mexico; Almon Roth, WLB, and Albert S. Schmidt of Harrisburg, Pa., all past presidents.

Wheeler, an executive vice-president of Pope & Talbot, Inc., California industrial corporation, is a former newspaperman, lumberman and steamboat executive. He has been a Rotarian since 1925.

More Time for Divorces

Under a ruling now in effect, it takes between three and six months to get an uncontested divorce in District Court while three months ago a decree could be obtained in less than six weeks after filing.

As a result, only a few divorces are being granted in the court daily. In October divorces were being handed out at a rate of 30 a day.

The ruling is that no divorce will be advanced for trial unless for an urgent reason, such as impending military service. Divorces now must wait their turn.

Pleads Guilty in Theft

Miss Comalee O. Pfeiffer, 28, former desk clerk at the Ebbitt Hotel, pleaded guilty yesterday before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, to a charge of stealing a $2600 ring at the hotel. Arrested Monday in Richmond, Va., she was said to have taken the ring from a package which belonged to a jewelry salesman. The ring was pawned for $900, police said.

P. O. to Seek Deferments For 1000 Men

The Washington City Postoffice system will seek draft deferments for approximately 1000 pre-Pearl Harbor fathers it employs, Postmaster Vincent C. Burke has informed District Selective Service Director William E. Leahy.

Leahy said this was the first indication he had received from any branch of a Federal agency as to how many deferments will be sought under the new deferment setup for Federally employed fathers, announced January 4.

7500 Appeal Cases Here

Meanwhile it was learned the cases of more than 7500 men employed in Washington and deferred by draft boards in other areas have been received by the District Appeal Board here for review. More cases are coming in all the time, it was said.

The Washington City Postoffice system has a yearly average total of 4000 employes.

The requests for deferments in the city system will be turned over to the agency committee of the Postoffice Department, Burke said.

Work Ahead for Board

The agency committee may then request 60-day deferments for the 1000 men. During the 60 days the War Manpower Commission's central review committee will review and pass on each of the cases. The deadline for all requests for deferments for Federally-employed fathers is Saturday. At that time National Selective Service will lift the present ban against inducting any prewar father in Federal employment.

Meanwhile, it was pointed out yesterday, the stay of inductions in the cases of Federal fathers and others who appeal from induction orders is, in many cases, necessitating second blood tests. Selective Service officials consider the blood tests given in the screening or preliminary physical tests good for only 90 days and registrants not actually in the Army at the end of that period must take another.

D. C. to Act Also

The District will ask occupational defrement of 164 pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, including 62 rookie policemen and 18 firemen, Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, chairman of the District government's draft deferment committee announced yesterday.

The committee acted on draft deferments of "keymen" asked by heads of District government departments because of length of service, age, essential nature of occupation, and difficulty of replacement. Thirty-two requests were denied.

Deferment requests now will be sent for final decision to the review committee on deferment of Government employes established within the War Manpower Commission.

Further requests may be forwarded later this week when reports from the schools are received.

Fowler said deferments were asked only of persons necessary to the District. Policemen and firemen with more than one year's service already are deferred automatically as keymen. The committee's request would classify all policemen and firemen as keymen, whether they had served six months or six days. Fowler pointed out the Metropolitan Police now are short 225 men and the Fire Department is lacking 93.

Others for which the committee is asking blanket deferment are engineers of all types, cooks and second cooks in District institutions, and attendants at the District Training School in Laurel, Md. "We just can't get any kind of replacements for these people," Fowler said.

Injured in an attempt to flee police in an undertaker's limousine he had stolen last Thursday, Charles Steven Thornberg, 19-year-old naval trainee stationed at Bainbridge, Md., died at Garfield Hospital yesterday.

Meanwhile, police were searching for the hit-run motorist who struck Louise Extine, 21, of 2329 Park pl. se., at Naylor rd. and Fairlawn ave. se. at 2:30 a. m. yesterday. She was treated at Casualty Hospital for lacerations and possible fractured collar bone.

Thornberg lost control of the speeding sedan he had stolen from Joseph W. Gawler, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw., in the 2100 block Georgia ave. nw. Two Sixth Precinct policemen, Pvts. Clarence Roberts and Otto Paris, who had chased the youth 4 miles at speeds in excess of 80, saw the crash.

The seaman suffered a fractured skull, internal injuries and a broken left leg. He was the second traffic fatality this year.

Four were hurt, none severely, as the result of a collision of two trucks at Sherman ave. and Harvard st. nw., about 5 p. m. yesterday.

By Robert Tate Allan

The Christian approach to personal, community and international problems was discussed last night by more than 700 delegates from 75 churches, as the Federation of Churches' Christian School opened at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw.

Warworkers, men and women in uniform, homemakers, preachers, Sunday school teachers, educators and many others attended the sessions that drew capacity audiences, and which will be continued six Tuesday nights.

In the class on "The Other Side of Washington," James Ring, administrative officer of the National Capital Housing Agency, said that private industry must be prepared to shoulder its part of the responsibility for better housing.

Dr. Howard Thurman, dean of the Howard University Chapel of Howard University's School of Religion, preached at the assembly session, and the Rev. Edwin Tuller, assistant pastor of the host church and dean of the school, presided.

Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of the host church, led a discussion group of 200 men and women on the subject of "How to Be a Real Person in a Confused World." The federation's committee on Christian Education, of which the Rev. Robert K. Nevitt, pastor of Brightwood Park Methodist Church, is chairman, sponsors the school.

City News in Brief

$2722 in Clothes Stolen

Thieves early yesterday drove off in a Raleigh Haberdasher truck loaded with $2722 worth of men's and women's clothing, which had been parked in the rear of the store in the 1300 block of F st. nw. The truck was later recovered empty by officers of No. 2 Precinct in an alley in the rear of 614 M st. nw.

The loot included 43 men's suits, 5 dozen men's hats, 69 ladies' dresses and 7 men's overcoats.

Officials of the Hecht Co. reported yesterday that five fur coats valued at $125 each and three men's sharkskin suits all worth $139 were stolen from the store Saturday. The coats were taken from a loading platform in the rear of the store, while the suits were said to have been removed from a men's department display.

$25,000 in Bonds Sold

Twenty-five thousand dollars worth of war bonds and stamp corsages amounting to more than $300 were sold at the Military District of Washington's dance held at the Shoreham Hotel on Monday, the office of Capt. Willard A. White, director of civilian personnel for the military district, announced yesterday.

Glazier Shoots Self

Earl L. Strickland, 28-year-old glazier, admitted to police yesterday that he shot himself "with suicidal intent" in the bathroom of a rooming house at 1524 North Capitol st. because he was despondent over rejection by the Coast Guard.

Now in critical condition at Casualty Hospital, Strickland took an automatic pistol owned by his landlord, William P. Freedman, and wounded himself in the left chest, according to police. He then walked next door to a barber shop owned by Freedman at 1522 North Capitol and collapsed.

Last Man Club Elects

Samuel L. Holston of 3580 13th st. nw. was recently elected president of the Last Man Club of Washington, it was announced yesterday.

Others named were Joseph B. Irvine, first vice-president; Lloyd E. Henry, second vice president; William B. Covert, secretary; Arthur W. Byron, chief of staff; William R. Beall, judge advocate; Penn H. Howard, chaplain; Dr. William T. Gill, jr., surgeon; Dorsey G. Myers, historian; Reginald G. Reilly, sergeant-at-arms, and Edmond Baldwin, color sergeant.

Veneral Unit Equipped

Furniture has been moved into the new 50-bed venereal disease building at Gallinger Hospital and patients will be admitted beginning today, the Health Department announced yesterday. This brings to 100 the number of beds available at the District center opened last summer.

ODT Taxi Violations

Taxicab transportation from Washington to Quantico, and Camps Pickett and Lee has been brought to the attention of the Office of Defense Transportation and some 25 District cabbies face revocation of their certificates of wartime necessity, it was revealed yesterday. The PUC has no control.

William N. Tobin, District manager of ODT, described the practice of driving servicemen back to camps as "a racket among some of the fly-by-night drivers looking for easy money."

He asserted that Metropolitan police and military authorities are cooperating in an effort to limit the practice of cabs traveling farther from Washington than the 10-mile-limit established by ODT.

Dead Infant Found

A tiny infant girl was found dead yesterday afternoon in a cardboard box in the Lost and Found Department at Union Station, it was learned from police. Paul C. Ratliff, employed by the Washington Terminal Co., opened the box, police said, which was removed from a locker in the Union Station's concourse on January 2. Lockers are emptied every 24 hours when the property fails to be removed.

Morgenthau to Speak

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau will pay tribute to volunteer war bond salesmen participating in the Fourth War Loan drive at a testimonial dinner in the Mayflower Hotel on February 15.

The dinner will be one of several dinners sponsored by the American Hotel Association throughout the country, beginning next Tuesday.

Mistreated Hired Horse

Frederick H. Richardson, 22, Negro, of 1814 Benning rd. ne., was fined $25 in Municipal Court yesterday for mistreating a saddle-horse he had rented. Witnesses testified Richardson rode the horse too hard in Rock Creek Park on Christmas Day.

In sentencing Richardson, Judge Thomas D. Quinn said, "It is a shame that the people who rent these saddle-horses don't pay a little more attention to the persons they rent them to."

Mrs. Benson Joins WAC

Mrs. Mary Foley Benson, well-known local aviatrix and only woman president of the Aero Club of Washington, has joined the WACS and is stationed at Gunter Field, Ala.

Mrs. Benson has 360 flying hours to her credit and gave up jobs as test and courier pilot to become Private Benson. She formerly lived at Hyattsville, Md.

Accident Amazes Court

Expressing amazement at the fact that three youths were not killed in an automobile accident described for him in a traffic court case yesterday, Judge Nathan Margold commented, "They must have been so drunk they were relaxed."

The driver of the car which crashed into a telephone pole was fined $200 on a charge of driving on a suspended permit. He is Anthony F. Iacone, 19, of 4010 Minnesota ave. ne., who was said by police to have been driving home from a beer party when the accident occurred.

Rent Revenue Seen Higher Despite OPA

In general, industry and real estate owners are deriving increased revenues from their enterprises despite the regulations of the Office of Price Administration, Judge Bolitha J. Laws of the United States Emergency Court of Appeals, last night told the District Bar Association.

To an audience of 350 which included virtually all the justices of the District Court, Justice Laws said:

"In case of rentals, the increased occupancy of the housing accommodations have actualy been shown to have resulted in increased revenues, notwithstanding the rolling back of the charges.

"In those cases where industry shows that it is threatened with loss or impairment of its power to operate, or where it shows that the general profit position of an industry is worse than it was before defense activities began, the administrator has granted relief."

Justice Laws is one of three members of the court which was specially constituted with exclusive power to pass upon validity of maximum price or rent regulations.

While in the first 10 months of its existence it had been called upon to pass upon only 15 cases, in the past year 113 cases were filed, of which 21 cases have been finally decided.

Justice Laws was introduced by President Milton W. King to the group which was meeting in the Mayflower Hotel. All District Court justices were invited as guests.

The film "Baptism of Fire" was shown at the meeting and those in attendance were urged to participate in the Fourth War Loan Drive.

Blood Donors Thanked by Boy's Mother

Nearly a score of Washingtonians whose blood soon will flow in the veins of 4-year-old Billy Meers in the form of life-sustaining plasma yesterday received the "heartfelt thanks" of the boy's mother in Texas.

While preparations to rush plasma to the boy's sickbed were under way, it was learned transfusions that have kept the child alive for several months were stopped Sunday. Hospital officials explained they could not continue them unless and until their blood bank had received 100 pints of blood to refill its supply.

Gallinger Donor Center

Billy's physician said he believed the child could go on for a week or so without plasma.

The mother, Mrs. Charles Meers, learned of the plan of Gallinger Hospital in cooperation with The Washington Post through an Associated Press story of numerous efforts throughout the Nation to help her son.

Under the plan here the hospital will release as many pints of plasma from its blood bank as it receives from donors for ailing Billy.

"I hope those people in Washington know my heartfelt thanks goes out to them," Mrs. Meers said.

First Shipment Off Tonight

Gallinger's blood donor clinic yesterday began accepting donors who want to give their blood to the boy. Inquires indicate the number of donations will be big enough to enable The Post to make the first plasma shipment to Baylor Hospital in Dallas tonight.

The donor clinic at Gallinger is open from 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., and all volunteers should call there to make appointments. They should specify the purpose of their donation. Any type of blood is good, it was pointed out, since the boy is getting plasma.

Although response from all over the country has been reported, the concrete action taken by The Post is the only known organized effort of getting the blood to the boy.

Flanagan to Air Views on Fare Cut BeforePUC Friday

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan yesterday said he would present his views on petitions to hold public hearings on Capital Transit Co. rates and to reduce fares to 4 tokens for 30 cents and a weekly pass for a dollar to the commission, which meets next on Friday of this week.

Under an order of last summer, the PUC has been investigating depreciation charges, determination of fair value and fair rate of return. However, no date has yet been set for a hearing, and the PUC now has before it a motion of the Maryland and District Industrial Union Council and the Washington Industrial Union Council asking the commission to order a hearing by February 1.

Austrian Refugee Succumbs to Gas

Hans Blau, 35, Austrian refugee, who had been living here for about four years, was found unconscious in the gas-filled kitchen of his home at 69 S st. nw., by his wife, Sheila, when she returned from work last night. Casualty Hospital was called and Dr. R. K. Greenbank pronounced Blau dead.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide. Blau, a pharmacist, had been unemployed for some time.

CAA Jobs for Veterans

Job openings for disabled veterans in the air traffic control and communications divisions of the Civil Aeronautics Administration were announced yesterday by CAA Administrator Charles I. Stanton. Applicants must be certified by the Civil Service Commission.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Worried by Differences in Background, Education And Faith, Girl Refuses to Say Whether She Loves College Boy; This Causes Strain; He Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 21 and the girl in question is 20. We are both natives of this city. I am in college here and she is a working girl. I met her 10 months ago and have dated her once a week, every week since. I am very deeply in love with her and she told me on two occasions that she loved me. But that was earlier in our friendship. I don't know whether she still loves me or not. When I ask her, she neither affirms nor denies it.

At times, her attitude is most perplexing. She knows that girls have always liked me very much; and were very demonstrative in their attentions. I am an only child, and she says, "spoiled." That I deny; though perhaps I am biased. Still, I deny it. Prior to meeting me, she went regularly with a fellow who was later drafted. She told me she liked him very much because he was such a pleasant chap; but she says there was no "spark" between them. There is more than a spark between us. Our physical attraction is very strong, though our spiritual (or rather, mental) attraction bogs down at times. This is my fault. When I feel she doesn't love me, I become moody and argumentative.

She feels acutely self-conscious over the fact that I am college-trained and she is not. When I take her to college functions, she always says she doesn't see why I go with her, when there are so many attractive college girls of my own religious faith and social background. Sometimes I interpret these remarks to mean that she doesn't wish to go with me any more. Am I right? When discussing marriage, the question of religion arises. We both want children; but she feels that when I would be giving the children their religious instruction, they would become more attached to me. She also feels that I might not marry her unless she joined my church. I have not answered that. Also, she is under the impression that if I would not marry her, owing to religious differences, it would mean that I do not love her dearly. Can you offer any suggestions as to how I can ascertain her real feeling toward me?

MICHAEL.

Girl Isn't Sure Of Man's Devotion

DEAR MICHAEL: I think the girl is inclined to be in love with you; but inhibited from freely giving her whole heart by an instinct which warns her that your character isn't big enough, nor the quality of your devotion to her fine enough, at present, to guarantee your appreciation of that great gift. Actually, you are not yet truly in love with the girl, though strongly attracted to her physically and grudgingly fascinated by the reserved and enigmatic facets of her personality. True love has been defined by one eminent psychologist as "that state in which the satisfaction and security of another person becomes as significant to one as one's own satisfaction and security."

These definitions of love certainly do not apply to your rather stiff-necked court of her, which I will wager is unconsciously colorated by condescension. I imagine you have somewhat of a conviction that it is pretty Quixotic or Fairy Prince of you to take her to college functions and put her on a par with sorority belles,—when in truth and fact she is a "working girl," who lacks college training and other social advantages you have been given. The girl's acutely self-deprecating awareness of the fact that you are college-trained and she is not; and her "always saying," that she doesn't see why you go with her, when there are "so many attractive girls" of your own religious faith and social background at your beck and call, suggest that there is lacking, either in your character or in the "mixture" of your regard for her, a genuinely aristocratic element of consideration which would make her feel completely at ease in the shelter (figuratively speaking) of your arm; and elevated by your homage to a position of unassailable security and protected prestige.

Moody Impatience Is Not Reassuring

THERE IS, of course, the alternate possibility that the girl is (as the phrase goes) underbred; and hence somewhat vulgarly on the defensive against a more privileged classification of persons, whom she tends to regard as her betters. And if this is the explanation of her mentally awkward behavior at college parties,—behavior which communicates her discomfort to you, without your understanding its significance,—then I should say that you two are simply blundering along in a mesalliance, engendered and sustained by physical appeal; and that the potentials of love, both lasting and true, are not present and never will be. Provided, I mean, that you really are her superior in intellectual equipment and quality of breeding.

Maybe you meet on a par, insofar as brains and personality-fiber are concerned,—with your moot advantages being altogether of a material sort. As I get the picture, at this distance, I incline to share the girl's distrust of your fundamental interest in her,—which smacks more of impatience to reduce her to a worshipful state of willingness to comply with your terms, whatever they might eventually turn out to be; than of emotional treasure laid at her feet, at her service to enrich her life.

Russian Diplomat Is Honor Guest

The National Council of Jewish Juniors will continue its series of informal officers' parties in 1944, the first to be held tomorrow at 8 o'clock in the club studio of the Hotel Fairfax, 2100 Massachusetts ave, nw. Maj. Paul N. Asseyez of the Russian Embassy will be guest of honor.

An all-Russian program of entertainment has been planned for the party. Miss Betty Baum, well known pianist who has appeared as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra, and her mother, Mrs. Clara Baum, will perform a musical sketch of Peter Tschalkowsky entitled "Meet the Master." Miss Helen Gish Myers, well known concert singer, will sing semiclassical Russian songs. There will also be dancing and refreshments.

Warning: Don't Wreck Child's Faith in You

With the best of intentions a mother may do "awful" things to her child, awful in the sense of the results.

They do them thoughtlessly, driven by their helplessness to control their children's behavior. For if frustration by the parent may drive a child to temper tantrums, a child's frustration of the aims and purposes of the parent drives her to the same point of high emotion.

Mrs. J. B. has made a mistake, admitted it and now wishes to undo it. "I have a girl of 4 and a boy of 15 months," she writes. "Just recently they have been playing together and they certainly tear the house down. They scream and holler and make me so nervous and angry that one day I told them I would go away and leave them if they were so bad.

Child Becomes Vigilant

"The boy didn't make much of it but the girl began to cry and ever since if I walk out of the room she is right behind me. If I go outside and she calls and I don't answer she cries and runs out after me.

"She won't go outside to play with the children unless I am with her. I would be glad if you would help me end this problem."

Since you know so well what initiated it the solution is simple. You have, by your thoughtlessness, wrecked the child's faith in your constant love and protection.

This "sense of security" is essential to the wholesome development of children and you have threatened to take it away because you couldn't control her ordinary childish behavior.

You will have to help her to regain the assurance she has lost. She must be shown that even if you deplore, disapprove or even punish her behavior, it is the behavior which arouses your emotions, not the child.

Regain Her Confidence

You love her under any and all circumstances. You will always protect her, because that is your privilege and responsibility as parent. You wouldn't dream of being faithless to that responsibility, so how cruel to imply to the child that you would!

You will have to be as convincing in your explanation of your mistake, because you got angry, as you were in your threats. Many a behavior problem of real magnitude crops up because of the child's belief that the parent may abandon her. Thus it becomes necessary for a child to remain on constant guard against such happening.

You've seen some of the results already. Undo them immediately by your truthful explanation.

Our leaflet, "Children's Quarrels," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of the Washington Post.

India Nobleman To Address AAUW

A reception in honor of the guest speaker, Sir Ramaswami Srinewasa Sarma of India, will be given by the American Association of University Women, Washington branch, at the clubhouse tonight at 8 o'clock. He will arrive in this country the first of the week and be here about three months. He will speak on the India war effort.

Socialite Has Cheered Veterans For 25 Years Since Last War

By Genevieve Reynolds

Some folks take their philanthropic works in fits and jerks—or rather when it's fashionable. Quite the contrary with handsome Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, prominent socialite, who began her war efforts with the Gray Ladies' Corps during World War I. Twenty-five years ago she started taking cigarettes to the veterans in Walter Reed Hospital. She hasn't missed a week since.

Giving away smokes to the Yanks wasn't much of a sacrifice for her—that is, until about 14 years ago when her large fortune vanished and she was confronted with the problem of earning a livelihood. Even in the leanest years, when she first began selling dresses, hats, etc., to her friends, she continued the practice. To this day, though it isn't generally known among her friends, she buys more than 100 packages of cigarettes a week for the wounded in Walter Reed. While it means economizing—she still works, even as you and I, for a living—she doesn't consider it a sacrifice—just a pleasure. Do a little multiplying and you will see that the cigs run into a neat sum. That isn't all, she closes down her business every Monday to continue her work as a Gray Lady at the hospital. You can bet your last pair of nylons that if it weren't for economic necessity, she would give six or seven full days to the war effort instead of one. On the side—she helps put over the servicemen's dances at St. John's Church. So far she has given eight there this season.

MRS. ELDRIDGE JORDAN

This is the second in a series of articles about women who are doing an excellent job in the war effort. Each one selected is making some sort of sacrifice—either time, money, pleasure or all three—to help win the war.

For two years—peacetime—she used to take one sick veteran his dinner every day. An adding machine couldn't total all the errands she has done, letters written, or the kindnesses ministered to the veterans at Walter Reed during these 22 years. There was one patient who refused to talk with anyone, but kept his eyes turned toward the wall for two years. Somehow, Mrs. Jordan discovered that he liked music. Fortunately, Fritz Kreisler came to town. She invited him to accompany her to the concert. He did. Thus began his revival of interest in life. Later she had an opportunity to introduce the veteran to the great artist.

One group of veterans pooled their resources and bought her a silver service. This she values greatly, but not half as much as the letters of appreciation that still come to her—many from those of the first World War. She keeps in contact with many of the old veterans.

Actually, she started her war work as a Red Cross conteen cook. Soon she rose to the rank of Colonel. Often she arose in the cold mornings of 1918 to be on hand to serve the boys coffee and food at 4:30 a. m. It was strenuous work but she enjoyed it. Mrs. Larz Anderson started the canteen down by the railroad tracks to serve the traveling soldiers. Mrs. Mason Gulick, now in charge of the USO Canteen at the Union Station, was the chairman of that first canteen. When she left, Mrs. Jordan was named chairman, not of one, but three canteens.

When Miss Mabel Boardman and Mrs. Henry R. Ray, together with officials of Walter Reed, organized the Red Cross hospital corps, in 1918, soon to be called Gray Lady, Mrs. Jordan was one of the first to sign up. In fact, she is one of the few, faithful, original members of that group in active service today. Incidentally, it was the patients in the hospital, who first dubbed the group Gray Ladies. The idea came because of the serviceable gray dresses worn by the ladies . . . definitely, had nothing to do with their cheerful faces and gay smiles.

Martha Ellyn's Household Gleanings

Entire Table Setting Will Thus Be Reflected

Good grooming is not an exclusive with clothing. Sparkle goes with glassware as much as clean gloves do with your best bib 'n' tucker. A hostess may serve the finest of food, but if her china and glassware doesn't have that clean cut look, guests will not be favorably impressed.

Martha Ellyn

Glass goblets with a murky haze will not have the stimulating effect on diners as those brilliant with fire and sparkle. So look to your glassware if you want to be considered a fine housekeeper.

Painless Procedure

It isn't a major operation to keep candlelabra, ash trays, goblets, tumblers, salad plates and other glass items with this aura of sparkle. Just a little special thought to the way in which you wash and polish glassware will give excellent results.

A special white powder solvent used in the water when washing glassware will give added brilliance. This gives generous results for the expenditure. A few drops of ammonia in the final rinse water makes glass sparkle. However, it should not be used with metal-trimmed glass, such as the silver and gold encrusted kind.

Cloudy glass may be caused by scratches or a film of grease. Sometimes a soap film results from the use of hard water. Washington water is not exactly "soft." The mineral salt in hard water units with soap and forms curds. Dirt particles combine with these curds.

General Suggestions

When milk has been in glass, rinse thoroughly with cold water before washing. If glass is sticky, rinse with lukewarm but never hot water.

As a safeguard against chipping, use a rubber pad in the dishpan.

Place a pad of turkish toweling on the drainboard so glassware won't get cracked and nicked if accidentally upset.

Do not plunge a glass that has held an iced beverage into hot water. Glassware should not be subjected to sudden and extreme changes of temperature.

Should two water tumblers stick together—in event someone unthinkingly "stacks" them do not try to force them apart. Fill the inside glass with cold water and set the outer one in warm water. This will separate them at once.

Pitchers and vinegar cruets are two items that require a little special effort to remove any deposit which accumulates in them. If your glass pitcher has a film on the bottom, shake tea leaves and vinegar in it until the deposit disappears. A cloudy vinegar cruet can be cleaned by allowing a diluted solution of household ammonia to stand in it for a short time.

Sorority to See Doll Collection

Mrs. Rene Jones Taylor, who is nationally known for her extensive and beautiful collection of dolls, will exhibit a large group of them when she speaks before the Gamma Phi Beta Alumnae Chapter tonight at the home of Miss Edna Buhrer.

This display is intensely interesting because the dolls are the result of Mrs. Taylor's handiwork and imagination. Each doll bears materials furnished by that person she represents and, in many instances, wears a gown made from materials furnished by that person or a member of her family.

'Capital More Hectic Than Bush Country'

British-Born, Mrs. Cox Has Traveled World As Wife of Adventurous Diplomat

By Carolyn Bell

After living for two years "on the fringe of the bush" in New Zealand, Mrs. Geoffrey Cox finds Washington absorbing—almost too absorbing, one might say.

Mrs. Cox and her diplomat husband have led a hectic existence since war clouds started to gather over Europe almost a decade ago. At the present the young and able Mr. Cox serves as First Secretary of the New Zealand Legation, and during the recent year-long absence of Mr. Nash held the post of Charge d'Affaires.

They both have a myriad of interests outside their jobs and what is more amazing seem to find time to pursue them. A year and a half ago Cox came here directly from the front (then Greece and Crete) to serve on the legation staff. In several months Mrs. Cox arrived from New Zealand with the children and settled down in Washington.

'Pioneer' Existence In New Zealand

She arrived fresh from a pioneering venture in New Zealand. "At least I like to think of myself in that category," she said with a chuckle. Born and raised in England Mrs. Cox decided to get to know her husband's country really well. So when Cox enlisted in the Army she left London for New Zealand. Instead of settling down in a city she decided to rough it. "I went out as far as it was safe to go," she said. She and the two boys lived outside of Aukland miles from anywhere. "Of course, we did have telephone and electricity," she added. But they raised most of their own food (including lemons and oranges) and became nearly self-sufficient.

When the subject of her dress designing was broached Mrs. Cox laughed it off as merely a means of making money—something she needed at the time. However, she did make a name for herself in that line both in London and in New Zealand. But at present she has other irons in the fire and hasn't time for designing. "Nor the inclination," she added.

It was at Oxford that Mr. and Mrs. Cox met. He was a Rhodes scholar and she a student of English literature. Cox took a job as a reporter on the London Daily Mail and later served as one of their foreign correspondents. So he has seen this war from three angles—as a soldier, reporter and finally as a diplomat.

Children Born in Vienna, Paris

Their two lively boys chose rather inopportune times (and places) to make their appearance in the world. Peter, aged 6, was born in Vienna shortly before the Anchluss, while Patrick, 4, was born in Paris not long after France got into the war. Mrs. Cox left Paris and returned to London while her husband remained "on the job" and traveled with the armies through Belgium, Holland and France.

Just to add to all of his other accomplishments, Mr. Cox has made an exhaustive study of the American Civil War. "He's always touring the historic battlefields—pacing them out foot by foot," reports Mrs. Cox. He goes in for movies, too, mostly the home variety, but did make one in the Middle East which has been used commercially.

Mrs. Early To Christen Liberty Ship

The trip to the Deep South that Mrs. Stephen T. Early will take this weekend will serve a double purpose.

Stopping first in Jacksonville on Friday morning she will officiate at the christening of a Liberty ship, the John Einig; that afternoon the wife of the President's secretary will continue to Columbus, Ga., to see her son, Lieut. Stephen T. Early, jr., who is stationed at a nearby Army post.

Accompanying Mrs. Early when she leaves Washington tomorrow night will be her daughter, Helen Virginia, who will be her mother's maid of honor at the launching ceremonies. They expect to return to the Capital about the middle of next week.

The ship to be launched is named for the late John Einig, inventor of the three-tone steam whistle which was presented to the City of Jacksonville in 1882. The whistles, widely known as "Big Jim," are now used on ships as are many other devices invented by Mr. Einig.

Gen. 'Pat' Tansey Is Grandfather

It's a difficult time Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Patrick H. Tansey are having these days, for they are trying to locate Patrick, jr., who is now a major and is "somewhere on maneuvers." The reason they want to reach him is to let him know that he is the father of Patrick Henry Tansey 3d, who arrived at Georgetown Hospital on Saturday to the former Miss Justine Ann Guillou, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Justin Victor Guillou of New York.

Young Patrick the third has quite a military heritage. His uncle Ted is now Lieut. Hubert Edward Tansey, also somewhere on maneuvers; his uncle Robert is a cadet at West Point, and his uncle Michael, now 4 years old, is already talking about going to "The Academy."

Oddments of Interest Picked Up in Passing—About Persons of More Than Passing Importance

Rep. Stanley

Two New York Representatives, by the way, are currently making friends and influencing voters by efforts toward simplification. Walter G. ("Ham") Andrews has introduced a bill to simplify the soldier vote, and Joseph Mruk wants to simplify the income tax. Representative Andrews, incidentally, has a highly distinguished service record.

One of the few members of Congress to be awarded a Distinguished Service Cross, he won it while serving as a major with the Twenty-seventh Division of the United States Infantry in France. Before that he was with the First New York Cavalry, and even earlier he fought on the Mexican border as a private.

EUGENE KEOGH, Brooklyn Representative, always looks as if he came out of a band box. "Wonder what dapper Keogh is up to—these days?" somebody in the press gallery whispered yesterday while observing Keogh as he thoughtfully pondered over a sheaf of papers and then went into hasty conference with a colleague. "No telling," come the reply, "but whatever it is, you can be sure it's another boost for Brooklyn." Keogh, you may remember, was the Representative who took such violent exception to Betty Smith's best-seller, "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," in a speech on the House floor last session.

More Republicans than Democrats were among those present yesterday when the President's message was read in the House of Representatives. Two or three cringed visibly when the phrase "ostrich isolationism" was sounded. Otherwise, there were no displays of emotion—no lifted eyebrows, no nods of disagreement or enthusiastic approval—as the clerk continued. I never saw a more serious appearing assembly in all my life.

HOUSE SPEAKER Sam Rayburn, recently returned from his Texas home, found awaiting him more invitations to address audiences throughout the country than he could ever accept. Those two speeches he made in Washington shortly before the holidays have been the subject of highly favorable comment all over America, and Americans far and wide are clamoring for more of the same. His next will be at the Jackson Day Dinner.

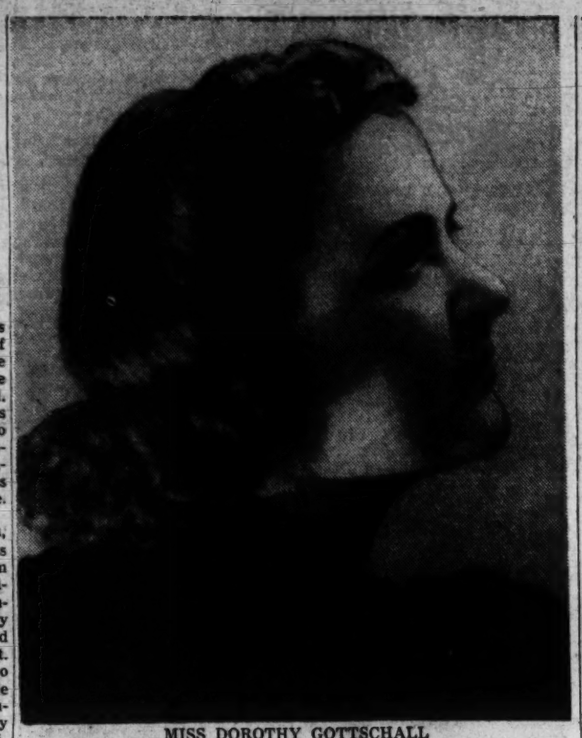

Speaker Rayburn

Speaking of one Texan reminds me of another—William L. Boyd, jr., who will be guest of honor at a birthday breakfast on Sunday. The president of the American Petroleum Institute, who is now serving as chairman of the Petroleum Industry War Council, will be feted by Maj. Burris C. Jackson, who also hails from the Lone Star State and has invited in a number of other Texans for an old-fashioned, breakdown Texas breakfast. Sounds like fun.

Scores of friends are urging Mrs. Joseph Casey to run for Congress against Philip Joseph Philbin, who got the Democratic nomination from Massachusetts' Third District when Joseph Casey, his predecessor, ran for the Senate against Cabot Lodge. One of the most attractive hostesses in Washington, Mrs. Casey has politely declined her friends' political pleas this time. "I haven't time," she said with a smile the other day. "After all, I've three small children, a house and a husband to keep me busy."

FROM PALM BEACH comes word that Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, who for years was the undisputed ruler of Palm Beach society, has taken up once more the quiet life she has led there each winter since the death of her husband. She has opened palatial El Mirasol, but declines to entertain at anything there except small, informal gatherings arranged for men in service.

Long before the war, Mrs. Stotesbury abdicated the social throne which she held so many years and which has never been filled since. She did, however, continue to entertain occasionally . . . up until the past two winters, when she has consistently and firmly declined to be hostess at any purely social event. "Wartime is no time for parties," she has wisely said time and time again—breaking that rule only rarely, such as when she gave that gala birthday fete for Senator Barkley a few weeks before she left Washington for the season.

The Horse of a Different Color; Australian Boys--American Girls

By Jean Craighead

There have been many dissertations about the American boys marrying the Australian girls. The old cliche takes a new twist. "What have they got that we haven't? Nothing; but they've got it here." Well, now the Australian men have got it here, and things are being squared away.

The Washington girls are commenting, with that "leap year" look in their eye, that there are more Aussies on the streets than previously and they've got it here.

This is a lend-lease war, and the American girl has been told by the Chug-A-Lug Beer Co. and the red, white and blue posters of the Wing Airplane Factory that she is part of it. She has been leasing that job of hers just long enough, and now is anticipating a little loan.

And an Australian loan is a cross between a leaping kangaroo and a Walt Disney cartoon. Spirit, daredevilness, imagination and intelligence comes with this new exchange.

Not only is the Australian a roaring good fighter, but he is one of the most delightful companions. Tales of his social invasion in other countries are funnier than "Star and Garter," and American girls who have been in on the fun are writing V-mail letters to that leased gob without the love and kisses.

The other evening an itinerent group of Down Unders, who were coming through from Canada and New York stopped in a restaurant here and decided to take it over. They swapped their coats with the waiters, crawled behind the bar, mixed the drinks, and asked the customers if the service was all right.

One handsome officer pulled up beside a foursome and—with malice toward none—not even the American who had married his girl, asked who was with the pretty red-headed WAVE.

Johnny on the spot (American), said: "Somebody else. Not you," and the long-legged, gay Aussie retorted: "There always is." Just to keep the party happy, he insisted on twisting a paper napkins into a bow, and fastening it in the red locks; then made himself a paper tie, and with a devastating you-and-I-should-get-together - and talk-about-postwar problems smile, he let it go at that.

Just as a tip on what to expect on an American-Australian alliance-date, here is an example of the Singapore days. Australians landed. More like the American cowboy in proportion that anything else, they strode through the streets, tried a brief ride in a rickshaw, got tired of being pulled, so put the native in the carriage and pulled him around the town. They danced down the streets with the cloistered womenfolk, to their silent delight and turned the town upside down in prankish merriment.

Get out your best humor, girls, you might be driving the car tonight. The Aussies are here, and all is fair in love and war!

Senora de Guachalla was the guest in whose honor Senora de Bascunan, wife of the First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, entertained at a farewell tea Monday afternoon and following that party the Minister-Counselor of the Peruvian Embassy and Senora de Chavez were hosts at dinner for Ambassador and Senora de Guachalla.

Senora de Bascunan's tea included only close friends of Senora de Guachalla. Taking their turn at the tea table were Senora de Rodriguez, wife of the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy; another Senora de Rodriguez, whose husband is the new Secretary of the Chilean Embassy; Senora de Illanes, wife of the First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, and Senora de Lopez-Larrain, wife of the Military Attache of the Chilean Embassy.

Another fete planned as a farewell to Senora Guachall was the luncheon yesterday given by Senora de Michels, wife of the Chilean Ambassador.

Liquor Dealer Unshaken On $9300 Swindle Charges

The testimony of Alexander Forman, head of the liquor wholesaling firm of Forman, Inc., remained unshaken yesterday despite several hours of crtical cross-examination, after he indicated he was swindled out of $9300 mainly because he could barely read and write.

He is the complaining witness in the Government's embezzlement trial in District Court of his former bookkeeper, Albert M. Steinberg, 47. When Forman spoke of the defendant yesterday, Steinberg would always turn away.

Seldom Saw Records

Forman testified he seldom saw the financial records of the firm and would have difficulty interpreting them anyway becausee of his extremely limited reading ability. He said Steinberg was entrusted with all the finances.

The case is being prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorneys Bernard Margolius and John L. Ingoldsby.

On cross-examination by Defense Attorney Austin Canfield, Forman said he met Steinberg in 1932 after a trip to Europe, and not in 1926 as Canfield contended in his opening statement. Forman said Steinberg then begged him for a job and that Mrs. Forman also urged his employment although there was another bookkeeper on the payroll.

Accused Handled Money

Forman said he had control of the business but Steinberg handled the money. Forman said he didn't even have the combination to the safe and couldn't even enter the offices after hours because of a burglar alarm system.

Forman said Steinberg never took a day off in eight years of employment. He said he gave Steinberg between $200 and $300 when his son was sick, and tore up the I. O. U.

Forman will take the witness stand again this morning.

Kronheim Firm Enters Denial In FTC Case

Milton S. Kronheim & Son, Inc., Washington's largest liquor wholesaler, yesterday filed an answer with the Federal Trade Commission to charges by the commission that the company had engaged in unfair, coercive and oppressive practices which tended to give it a monopoly in the sale of liquors and wines.

The answer admitted that the company was the exclusive agency for the wholesale distribution of certain brands of whiskies, but denied this constituted a monopoly.

While admitting that retail dealers have been unable to obtain sufficient whisky to meet the present demand, the answer denies they are compelled to purchase whiskies, wines, brandies and other alcoholic beverages in order to stay in business, or that the firm imposes any onerous purchase terms on retailers.

The answer also denies that: "there is any other liquor wholesaler in the District who adopts any practice which is more fair than that in which the respondent regularly engages; that its methods of doing business involve any unfair, coercive or oppressive practice; that it is in any manner unfair in its competition with other District liquor wholesalers; or that it requires, or has required, retailers in the District to buy wines or brandies in order to obtain whisky."

NAT BRANDYWINE and his orchestra will sound off in the Statler Embassy Room next Monday. They're topnotchers of the radio and stage, proper additions to the parade of big-time attractions that the Statler has presented since its opening . . . Pancho and his brilliant rhumbateers will say "Hasta la vista" to Washington on Saturday night.

JOAN STANTON, dreamy-eyed new singer of the King Cole Room

Set aside Friday for greetings to Tony Pastor, who'll be trekking back to the Victory Room with "Paradiddle Joe" and the rest of his outfit . . . The rumors about Ralph Hawkins taking his Crossroads Band into the Victory Room later are getting overpowering. But no can confirm.

CYCLORAMIC TRESSES. Nan Blackstone, the Circe of Olmsted"s, changes her coiffure colors as often as she does her vocals. A few months ago her hair was dark chestnut with a soignee silver streak at the temples. Then she went violently blonde with a severe up-do in back and a passel of Viennese curls falling over her eyes. (It's reliably reported that her friends went into spasms, followed by coma, on viewing this incarnation.) Currently, La Blackstone is waving a fluffy red-gold-brown hair-do at beholders, sometimes enriches it with a scattering of brilliants.

RACONTEURS as well as maestros are Pete Macias of the Lounge Riviera, El Patio's Little Jack Little and Miles Hallett, the Rainbow Room's Milton Davis. If there's a new yarn going, these gentlemen have it.

Evalyn Tyner, the redhead who leads the orchestra and plays the piano with such a frosty glitter at the chi-chi Club Jaina, seems to have broken the trail for girl musicians in Washington . . . Sasha Lucas of the new Latin Quarter has added Dorothy Quinn, clever saxist, to his orchestra.

A SHOWMAN'S CHILD is Sonny King, now hexing all listeners at Trade Winds. His daddy, George King, who's been singing in Broadway niteries for 28 years, is still going strong. Sonny has also sung in operettas, has a technic far beyond that of most singers. He was sidetracked into boxing for a while, decided to give it up before he began walking on his heels.

ALMOST REFUGEES were Leo Dryer and his band, now at Treasure Island, before they made their getaway from Europe. The Dryer orchestra was the last American unit to play at the Cannes Casino before the Big Trouble started. Leo also has the slightly dubious distinction of having taught the Lambeth Walk (certainly you can remember it; think hard) to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

The noted Heintze Brothers piano team at Restaurant "823" may be broken up. Gustave is being looked over by the Man with the Whiskers.

SOLID! "Honeysuckle Rose" as it's rolled all up and down the piano by Eddy Brown of Tommy Sulters' crew in the Cafe Caprice . . . "Rhapsody in Blue" as played handsomely by Hi Hat's Jack Neal . . . "Shoo, Shoo, Baby!" as given an extra high and hot swing by Ray King's big band at the Louisiana . . . The fancy ruffles that Lee and Leslie Miller of the Neptune Room put on our old pet, "Paper Dolly"

WASHINGTON 9, D. C.
2640 16th STREET, N.W.

December 14, 1943.

Mr. C. B. Dulcan, Sr.
The Hecht Company
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Dulcan:

I express to you the gratitude of the Polish people for Tribute to the Unconquerables. In this salute of encouragement from your nation to mine, you pour fresh hope and strength into the cause to which we are eternally dedicated.

Your presentation of Tribute to the Unconquerables adds tangible momentum to the faith in ultimate victory. Your expression of encouragement will be heard and understood by Poles everywhere.

Sincerely,

Jan Ciechanowski

Ambassador of Poland

"Keep Backing the Attack!" With these fighting words, the U. S. Treasury opens the Fourth War Loan on January 18th.

As a fitting prelude, leading up to and into this great Victory effort, The Hecht Co. is privileged to present a Tribute to the Unconquerables . . . a Nation-wide War Bond Drive, co-sponsored by the Saturday Evening Post, now in progress.

This coast-to-coast drive is sponsored by Poet Joseph Auslander's magnificent Open Letters to the Unconquerables, which millions have recently read in the Saturday Evening Post.

Auslander's letters have brought home to the people of this Nation the vivid, stark picture of the sacrifices made by tens of millions in the ravaged, war-torn lands. And the purpose of this drive, and the Fourth War Loan, is to impress our people with the great need for sacrifice now . . . to keep the attack rolling . . . to release these nations to fight . . . to speed the Victory for all.

SEE THE WINDOWS OF "THE UNCONQUERABLES"

SEE . . . The Dramatic Story of Greece picturizing the valiant spirit of a submerged but unconquerable people.

SEE . . . The Facts About Ravaged Poland and what the reign of a Nazi tyranny has done to a nation bathed in blood.

SEE . . . The Heroic Stand of Norway, the vivid evidence of our indomitable people who fight on and on.

SEE . . . The "Czechoslovaks Carry On!" The underground activities of the Czechs, in the face of Nazi barbarism and brutality.

SEE . . . A Tribute to The Netherlands and how the Fighting Dutch fight on for Victory against the overwhelming forces of Hitler.

FREE TO BOND-BUYERS AT THE HECHT CO. THIS WEEK

1. A set of five-color prints of Joseph Auslander's Open Letters to the Unconquerables will be presented to each purchaser of a $25 War Bond or more.

2. By special arrangement with the Ambassadors of Greece, Poland, Norway, Czechoslovakia and The Netherlands . . . important and interesting literature describing the various occupied countries will be presented to each purchaser of a $25 War Bond or more.

3. Each Bond buyer will receive free, a folder giving a biographical sketch of Joseph Auslander, and the story of how the Open Letters to the Unconquerables came to be written.
